If Summer Comes . . .

By WILLIAM L. DOUDNA (State Journal Radio Editor) What makes you realize you'll soon be buying and salt for the sidewalks, coal or oil and that new overcoat you promised yourself two winters ago, it's the arrival of the first announcements of autumn radio shows.

It's hard to believe, but the first of the returning programs hit the air last week. It was "Smilin' Ed" McConnell's program, which is on NBC-WIBA at 10:30 a. m. Saturdays.

Pepper Plants Climb Trees

While I was a student in high school (a good many years ago) I first heard the word "pep." I found that it was a slang word meaning "dash" or "go." A person has "pep" if he is lively and can put high spirit into what he is doing.

There are several kinds of pepper, but black pepper is by far the most common. It is obtained from the fruit of a vine which grows in the East Indies, also in the Philippines and, to some extent, in the West Indies.

The pepper plant climbs a tree like ivy. In places where people make a living by raising it, they set up poles on which it can climb, or plant trees for the same purpose. The vine gets along well in the shade.

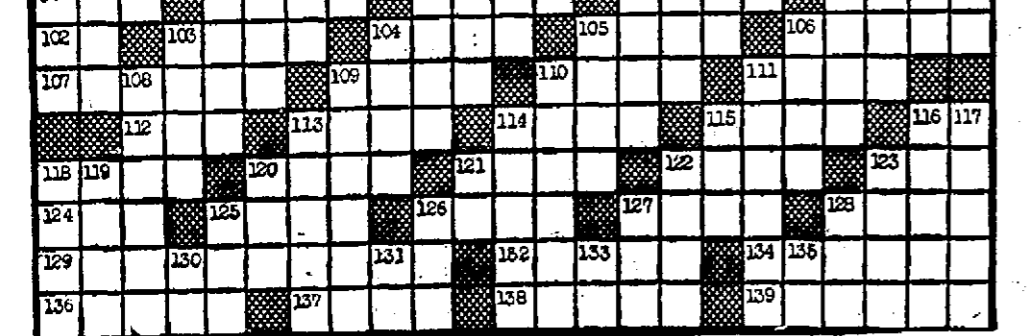

Small green berries grow in clusters on the pepper vine. They are about the size of peas. While they are green, they are picked and dried in the sunshine, or over a slow fire. As they dry, they turn black. Later they are ground into a powder.

So-called "white pepper" is obtained from vines of the same kind. The berries are not picked while green; they are left on the plant until they are ripe, and have a deep red color. Then they are washed and dried. The soft parts of the berries are removed, and the seeds are ground into white pepper.

Pepper was used in Europe during ancient times. It was very costly, since it had to be brought from the Orient. Kings and princes of the Middle Ages were much pleased when anyone gave them such a fine present as 5 or 6 pounds of pepper!

Besides black pepper and white pepper, we have Cayenne pepper, Jamaica pepper, Guinea pepper, Ethiopian pepper, and other kinds. These grow in the warmer parts of the world, South America and Africa, as well as Asia, have pepper plants, and so has Mexico. The Torrid Zone provides most of the world's pepper, but some is produced in the North Temperate and South Temperate Zones.

Housewives Combine to Rout Road Dirt LOGAN, O.—(UP)—The ladies of West Logan like to have things tidy, even the street. Traffic halted on Route 33 when angry housewives scrubbed the road for several hundred feet with their brooms and garden hoses after trucks moving earth from a nearby construction project had dirtied the highway.

They found it a hard task which ended with aching shoulders and blistered hands. The women, a spokesman said, were tired of having dust from the highway blown into their homes. So they complained to the city and the highway department. "When that brought no results, we decided to do the job ourselves," she said.
