Hope's 'Super Blubber Blaster'

By BOB HOPE
A lot of people wonder how I keep in such good physical condition. A lot of people—including me. Sometimes I'm amazed when I wake up fresh as a daisy after a mere 10-or-12-hour nap. I hop under an icy cold shower, and raise Cain with whoever let the pilot light go out under the water heater. I then turn to gaze at my trim and slender figure in the full-length mirror I picked up in the fun house at Coney Island. The one that makes you look fat I gave to Sinatra.

I've had 'em all. He's got over 100 ways of preparing prunes with plums. One day at the ball game I asked him if I could eat a hot dog. He said yes, but only the white meat.
Sometimes when I have been away on one of my out-of-town jaunts and come back a measly 12 or 15 pounds heavier, he puts me on a diet he calls his "Super Blubber Blaster." On this diet I take weight off so fast my tailor has to follow me around with a needle and thread to keep me from walking out of my clothes.

We have long days in our part of the world in June, but there is a place where you might go during that month and have darkness all the time.
I am thinking of the Antarctic. It is what some persons call "the bottom of the world." At its center is the South Pole.

Men started to hunt blue whales in the Ross Sea early in the present century. Norwegians under command of Captain Iverson seem to have been first to capture one of them.
An explosive steel harpoon was shot from a gun aboard Iverson's vessel, and it struck a blue whale. The big animal went far down in the water, struggling for freedom. After a time it was forced to rise for air, and then another harpoon was sent into its body.
