Bidder's Trap Play Catches Opponents, Assures Contract

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for N. E. Service

MOST good players can read the meaning of the plays made by their opponents. The real expert goes one step farther. He reads the meaning of the plays that his opponents fail to make! This is a difficult point to explain, but one example is worth a hundred explanations. Let us examine a hand recently played. The bidding was reasonable enough. Against a spade opening lead, West would have been down only one at four hearts. North that he had either six or seven hearts. Why had he not led the suit? His opening lead had obviously been a singleton, and it was possible that he had opened the singleton diamond even though he held a leadable heart suit. However, after he won with the ace of spades, West would not return a trump if he held a heart combination from which a lead seemed desirable. If West held all of the seven missing hearts, he would surely hold a leadable combination. If he held only six hearts, which one could be missing? Only if West lacked the king would the suit appear unleadable to him.

In other words, South read the meaning of West's failure to lead hearts. Having found out that East held the singleton king of hearts, South was now able to plan a new swindle.

He drew the rest of West's trumps, cashed the ace of diamonds and the top clubs, ruffed a club in dummy, and ruffed dummy's last diamond in his own hand. The stage was now set, and South nonchalantly led a low heart from his own hand.

By this time West was down to four cards, all of them hearts. Seeing a low heart led from the South hand towards dummy's 10, West played the jack. As South had foreseen, this trick was won by East's blank king. Now East had to return a suit

Bids will be opened by the City Council Sept. 26 at 11 a. m. for improvement of Fashion Ave. from Spring to 32nd St., and Rogers St., west end to Cherry Ave., by installation of sidewalks, curbs and driveway aprons.

At the same time bids will be opened for paving of the alley north of Poinsettia St., Gundry to Walnut Aves.

Total estimated cost of the three jobs is approximately $20,000. They are all 1951 Improvement Act projects, to be paid for out of assessment districts.

that allowed dummy to ruff while South discarded a heart loser. Since this held the loss in hearts to only two tricks, South succeeded in making his contract.

Try it and you'll agree It's true what they say about SPRED SATIN

THE WONDER PAINT with the original synthetic rubber emulsion formula tried and proved by millions everywhere for over 2 years

Architects Specify... Spread SATIN, as an Ohio architect says, "because of its durability, washability, pleasing colors and economy of application."

Interior Decorators Delighted! From New York: "highest in color and stability of tone... pastel shades and deep tones... used exceptionally for high-quality decoration."

Professional Painters Report... "SPRED SATIN will not spot or wash perfectly—even when painted on porous newspaper. Mask it yourself with ink, crayon, lipstick, carak, cooking oil... they see how easily everything washes off the Spread SATIN surface without leaving a trace."
