BUT PEOPLE APPEAR HAPPY

Seoul's a Dead City Amid Ruins of War

By O. H. P. KING
(FOR HAL BOYLE)

SEUL (AP) This capital city of Korea today is an enigma. Its people appear contented amid ruins such as few cities even in the path of war know.

Shots still ring out at night—and there is no explanation, only speculation. Business is moribund. The wheels of industry are idle; too many cogs are missing.

The Reds abducted them—the technicians, mechanics and artisans on whose skills a city depends for its modern comforts.

President Rhee's secretary recently called a locksmith to open a safe jammed by Communists. After several days the locksmith telephoned: "Mr. President, our safe expert was carried north by the fleeing Communists. We can find no other skilled safeman left in the city. The safe cannot be opened.

Ruin and devastation sit on the city like an oppressive monarch. Take a walk in downtown Seoul.

The vast majority of business buildings are nothing but four walls, gutted by Communist-set fires or burned out by American air and ground fire.

A photo shop is open for business but without film or printing paper.

Across an alley is a one-story building. A sign reads: "International cultural association of Korea." Fallen plaster has exposed the wooden skeleton; through it one sees a room barren except for a few benches and five venerable Koreans. They are seated—either absorbing invisible culture or merely resting.

Nearby is a glass shop—with glassless windowpanes. Plastered on the wall of a ruined building is a poster: "Hail to the victory of U. N. forces.

Another brightens a blackened structure: It says, succinctly, "thanks, U. S. Marine Corps."

There is a hustle and bustle in the streets, but it is the stirring of restless people, not the tides and eddies of business activity.

Most merchants whose stores are open lack stocks and customers. They cannot make plans in the confusion that swirls in the wake of war.

Skeleton staffs report for duty each day. At night they make their way back towards work desks except their heels.

Everything is not dead. Sidewalk vendors are plentiful. Their stands are stocked with cigarettes, chewing gum, candy and other items of unmistakable origin—the U. S. armed forces.

A few places show activity. A line queues up in front of a textile firm. Perhaps the wheels of the spinning industry will begin turning soon.

Another line has formed in front of a relief agency to get clothing.

United Nations officials, U. S. State Department representatives, Economic Co-operation Administration workers and military officers are seeking to restore the Korean economy. But progress is slow; the

Costume Party

Chief Len Scheffler, manager of the CPO Club, aboard the Long Beach Naval Station, has arranged a costume Halloween party at the club tonight for all chiefs and their guests in this area. There will be dancing, door prizes, and prizes for the best costumes.

Nevertheless, the citizens appear to be cheerful.

There is rice for today and enough for tomorrow and the next day. Perhaps there will be enough to last through the winter and into late spring.

Koreans hurry hither and yon through the ruins, exuding eagerness and optimism. They obviously trust the United Nations which liberated them from the harsh rule of Communism to restore their devastated land.

Quirino Fires Aid for U. S. Blast

MANILA, Oct. 31. (AP) President the U. S. Quirino today fired his private secretary, who authored a blast against the United States last week.

The secretary, Federico Mangahas, said Philippines were "pickers" in great and corruption compared to Americans.

Mangahas' statement—written from an official stationery—created a stir both in the Philippines and Quirino's private secretary.
