Several new releases of contemporary music by Columbia command attention today for their interest and importance. Only one of them probably will be very popthem probably will be very popular, but all are worth the attention of (1) the music student, (2) the serious listener interested in enlarging his scope, and (3) the collector.

Here they are:

Bela Bartok: Six quartets, played by the Juillard String and the Mother." recorded by the guester This compager's music Juillard quartet Plants Leonid played by the Juillard String and the Mother," recorded by the quartet. This composer's music Julliard quartet, Pianist Leonid has been given only a few recordings in comparison with his outlings in comparison with his outlings in comparison with his outlings in comparison with his outlings. The usually expressive his "Concerto for Orchestra" by the Pittsburgh orchestra under ducting. The usually expressive music is dulled by the reading of the composer's wife. This work Reiner and his "Concerto for Violin" by Menuhin and the Dallas Symphony under Doratl. The six quartets, Mme. Milhaud, and Symphony under Doratl. The six quartet, Mme. Milhaud, and squartets cover 32 years of composition, and one can follow his development fairly closely and note his individual qualities. The performance is first-rate.

Paul Bowles: "Concerto for Two

Paul Bowles: "Concerto for Two Pianos, Winds, and Percussion." recorded by Arthur Gold and Robert Fizdale with ensemble under Saniel Saidenberg... This work has sharp, witty writing, and a little languor, too. The percussion, incidentally, includes a milk botite and a cigar box.

played and expertly recorded. The music was written for amateur musicians. This is music anyone can enjoy.
