surfaces to obtain subtle grada-

In the area of the color print, Frasconi displays a vivid imagination and a re-sourcefulness that evokes admiration. There is, however, one item which is rather disturbing to this observer, at least, and that is a leidown in the matter of craftsmanship. There is too much of the

"come what may" attitude re-sulting in heavy, loaded, and often greasy surfaces. Frasconi has done some interesting things in the color technique such as using small blocks tions of pressed ink.

lies in the surface quality of his work, the implied and the actual textures that he achieves in his delineations.

It is interesting to note the rapid unfolding of Frasconi's talent toward maturity. In three early works dated 1944, Head, Downtown-Montevideo, and Head of a Woman, we have examples of carefully studied and self-conscious compositions. There is a too obvious selection of the "right-treatment" for the woodcut medium. A dependence upon devices which were exploited by the German Expressionists can be detected in these earlier works, expecially in the treatment of the sun in Downtown-Montevideo which recalls Lyonel Feininger.

In the Mexican Toy, the lower examples in its design quality which is expressed in the calligraphic idiom, lentury, Baudelaire spoke for Expressionism when he wrote that a work of art should be "the creations of the part of the composition is superb in its design quality which is examples.
