Dances and Critics Change

By WILLIAM L. DOUDNA (State Journal Theater Editor) "What has happened to you?" a long-remembered friend asked me after reading this newspaper's review of the Jose Limon dance recital. "How come you've changed your mind so much about the modern dance? You used to think it was bad, and now you go all out for Limon. What gives?"

"Well, it was all terrifically modern—if the most primitive of instruments, the drum, is modern; if the use of primitive angular movements is modern; if constant repetition, the primitive means of emphasis, is modern; if Elizabethan simplicity in settings is modern."

Balsa Is World's Lightest

Some day, while I am making a tour of Latin America, I think I shall play a little joke on other tourists. In such a country as Ecuador, I shall get a log 10 feet long and one foot thick, and shall place it on my right shoulder. Then I shall walk along a street, handling the log as if I were a very strong man.

important place in the making of life rafts. When it is used for rafts or life preservers, care should be taken to give it a waterproof coating so it will not become "waterlogged."

are heavier than water and which will sink in a hurry. I am thinking chiefly of certain ironwoods. There are more than a dozen kinds of hard, dense ironwoods. Various southern states in the United States have ironwood trees, and one kind, the Catalina ironwood, grows on Catalina and other islands off the California coast.

To do that with a log of oak or maple would be quite a task, but it would be simple enough with logs of balsa. I could get in Ecuador, Peru or some other Latin American country. I am thinking of logs of the balsa tree.
