feeling for the music, his ability to express that feeling.

Most of his songs were unfamiliar, but they served to exhibit all the facets of his talent, whether in the incredible sadness of Hahn's "Unfaithfulness" or the rollicking fun of "Jabberwocky," written by his skillful accompanist, Paul Berl.

The audience liked best—to judge by applause—Harrell's convincing performance of a group of Brahms songs, perhaps the best liceder singing a man has done here, and the fun-making of Charles Ives' "Memories" and of the fabulous song of the Munchallenges "Charles Ives' "Memories" and of the fabulous song of the Munchallenges "Charles Ives' "Memories" and of the fabulous song of the Munchallenges "Charles Ives' "Memories" and of the Memories "The Little White Charles White House."

Nevertheless, the works which many of his listeners will remember longest were those by modern Frenchmen -Duparc, Debussy, Poulenc, Hahn, and Faure. To them, he gave infinite care, exquisite shading.

For encores, there were "This Little Rose," by William Roy; "Gentle Annie," by Stephen Foster, and "The Crocodile," an old English song. Tonight, Harrell will sing early
