for them. Under Prof. Richard C. Church, the students gave Casadesus a sound backing for the Liszt E-flat concerto, a stimulating and brilliant work in which the planist showed himself in easy and unpretentions player, thoroughly versed in its technical aspects.

More than that, he played with such attention to the diversities of the concerto's movements that their individuality was easily noted, despite the Liszt innovation of tying them together with the effect of a single movement.

Appropriately, Casadesus played he Beethoven' "Appassionata" sonata with considerable drama, but some of this invaded the sec-
