WARPED FLOORS

Our early forefathers in this country had dirt floors in their cabins and maybe they were a lot smarter then we give them credit for being. A dirt floor won't do a lot of things a wood one will including warping and bulging. The reason boards in a floor bulge up or warp out of line is due to the fact that they have absorbed too much moisture and were not properly installed. If the condition is local, one board here and there you may be able to drive them back down into place. Place a smooth block of wood over the high point in the board and then give the block of wood a hard crack with a hammer. If you get the board down, use long wood screws rather than nails to hold it there. Sometimes you can get the board down by kneeling on it.

If your floor has bulged all over the place the best thing to do is rip it up and put it down correctly but you have to be careful in pulling up the boards not to damage them. Once the floor is up, check the subfloor for dampness because it's a pretty good bet that somehow that finished floor has been drawing moisture from some place. If it didn't, it wouldn't bulge up like it did. Of course, in some cases the reason a floor goes haywire like this is that few nails were used and they were far apart. Wood flooring should have nails spaced ten inches or so apart along the entire length of each board.

HEAR WITH YOUR BIG TOE?

The Truth About Hearing Aids

There has been so much confusion lately about hearing aids that we are pretty sure that many people are confused. (We don't quite understand all we hear ourselves.) We think that it's about time to clear the air.

Your hearing mechanism is in your head. You can no more hear through your wrist or elbow than you can through your big toe.

Every hearing aid consists of 2 units. One is the transmitter. This device picks up and amplifies sound waves and usually contains small batteries. All transmitters must be worn somewhere on the body.

Every hearing aid requires some type of receiver, or "button." This "button" must be in or behind the ear, although, if your hearing permits, it can be concealed under your clothing or in the hair. An example of this is the Beltone Phantamold, which hides the receiver "button" under the clothing or in the hair, and transmits sound to the ear through clear plastic tubing.

With a Beltone, you can receive the best of hearing service. And we can help you conceal the aid, if you should be sensitive, and if your loss permits. Examples:

- BELTONE'S NEW SKIN RECEIVER—NOTHING IN EITHER EAR. FITS BEHIND THE EAR WITHOUT A HEAD-BAND OR PRESSURE.
- Beltone's Phantamold—conducts sound to your ear with no "button" showing.
- Beltone's new outside microphone—no clothes noise. This outside microphone picks up sound without interference from clothing and completely eliminates clothes noise. This unit is contained in an attractive tie clasp for men, or a beautiful brooch for women. However, there must be a cord to the transmitter and to the hearing mechanism in the head.

Come in to any of our three convenient locations and let us consult with you about your hearing problems. Let us show you the Beltone foremost hearing aid. Appointments arranged in your home if you wish. Write, phone or come in today.
