V or Not TV in Hamlet

By WILLIAM L. DOUDNA [State Journal Radio Editor] Reports have been spreading around town that Madison will have a television station soon. One rumor says that a license has been granted.

As a matter of fact, nobody knows when we'll have a television transmitter here, and no license has yet been granted anybody, unless the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) is keeping it a secret, which seems rather unlike-

After that, there has to be decision by the FCC and an allocation of a frequency by the same body. Then somebody has to order the materials, set up the transmitter. acquire personnel, and go through a test period. Even after the FCC hurdle has been cleared, the equipment must be built and installed, but the international situation will come into the picture then, because of its effect on obtaining steel, copper, and other materials necessary for

In the meantime, there's the question of color television, which is still before the courts. This undoubtedly will have some bearing on the Madison situation. Meanwhile, the potential viewers are getting themselves in a critical frame of mind about the

Into its 94 pages, the author has crammed an amazing amount of information and argument. He tens the functions of the FCC (about which half the country's population apparently knows nothing); he lists the typical reactions of stations, sponsors, and advertising agencies to listener-viewer requests and complaints; he talks of educational television, pro and con; he tells their arguments in favor of present radio and television programs; he reviews reports on television's effect on children, and he tells how you, the ultimate consumer of TV fare dependently of each other-is recalled. Such organizations as these—Wisconsin's is now the Wisconsin Association for Better Radio and Television—can be highly successful, the author believes. In Wisconsin, as has been reported here, the effect on radio has been strong.

Whether it can be as effective on television is a problem of the future, but one to be considered seriously now. To help you consider it, I suggest you read "Television and Your Children."
