Answer to Question No. 2

A nation-wide survey showed A nation-wide survey showed that nearly 75 per cent of those polled believed employers should keep the less efficient men with families. This shows our hearts are in the right place, but raises the question of whether keeping less efficient workers would increase labor rosts, raise would increase labor costs, raise prices and thus be more expensive charity than other provision for the inefficient.

Answer to Question No. 3 Mostly false. Statistician L. I. Dublin reports there are slightly Dublin reports there are slightly more women than men, but not in the best "marriage ages"—prior to 40. In these ages. Dr. Dublin says, "there is still a satisfactory balance between the sexes; the chances are that 9 out of 10 average young persons will marry." Since women live longer than men; since 300,000 men were lost in World War II; since widowers are freerer to find mates than widows, and find mates than widows, and more often marry much younger women, there is some shortage
