As a consequence, the show is not intended to be George Alfano's "Capital City," Marge Hoffberg's a representative sampling of the range of work "Pedestrian," and Pat Molm's Trees."

The work in metal craft and ceramics is of a uniformly high quality technically. In design, cer-tain craftsmen have produced work of marked in-dividuality. Fine work in metal and in metal used with other materials, particularly wood and bone, was done by Harry Horning in his "Emanon" and a silver pendant, Bill Lidh in his "Pendant," Irv Kinney in "Modern Man" and "Ear Ring," Corrinne Helmke in "Pendant," Adelaide Ryerson in "Enameled Bowl," Don Herling in "Pendant," Don Enameled Bowl, "Don Herling in "Pendant," "Silver Meyer in "Pendant," Caroline Grether in "Sliver Bowl" and "Pendant," Dennys Pratt in "Pendant," and Charlotte Aronson in "Silver Bowl." The ceramic section is a large one and a welcome addition to the work in three-dimensional media. Some of the best of many craftsmen submitting work in the media are Clifford Kosy, Ruth Severud, Donna McGary, Grace Key, Margaret Spolar, Dave Suits, Lois Culver, Lois Pich, Alice Drewry, Lithographs include those by Edward Green and Eugene Mecikalski. Silkscreen prints of unusual quality and richness are by Marge Hoffberg and observed throughout the entire exhibition and in Dick Grooms. The etching combined with aquatint has been used frequently. Work in the media was done by George O'Connell, Fuller Griffith, Dennis Byng, and William Brueske. There is an excellent
