One reason for the heavy damage undoubtedly wis the restriction preventing escorting fighters from flying along the northwest bank of the river, the side from which attacking Red jets took off. this source believed. Grisham. secretary, and Melvin Campbell, treasurer.

Nationalist China sources declare that Russians are manning the Soviet-built MIG-15 jets.

Since no MIG has been downed in Allied territory, there is no certainty who is flying them, as far as could be learned here.

The Air Force said officially that two of 32 attacking B-29s were shot down and "several" were damaged. Additional information presumably is being with-mation presumably is being with-held temporarily for security reasons, but it can be said that number of crew members in the damaged planes were killed in the air battle. The total bomber casualties constitute a high per centage of the attacking force.

Air officers here subscribed fully to the warning of Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Far East Air Forces commander, that the Communists may spring an air campaign on United Nations These sources were confident Allied air power could deal with the Reds in air combat. Strate-meyer's Flifth Air Force, under Lt. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, has a formidable array of fighter planes, possibly as many as the Communists can muster.

Gen. James A. Van Fleet's Eighth Army ground forces would re-leeive greatly diminished aid in the form of air attacks on ground targets in the battle area. That form of air support has been a major factor in compensating for
