A mixture of anxiety for each other's pres-ence, fear of losing the loved one, etc., produces muscular tension, and pressure on the nerve ends, resulting in physical pain. Unromantically, in heartbreak, the stomach hurts more than the heart. But, it would be worth it if it hurt ten times as much Amswer to Question No. 2 Apparently, in some cases. At a meeting of the American Chemical Society, Dr. Roger J. Williams, University of Texas, stated that his experiments stated that his experiments showed that when rats were given an opportunity to drink alcohol, some took to it like a fish to water, some drank moderately and some refused to touch the demon, However, he cured many of the drunkards by speclar diet. In reviewing these ex-periments, Waldemar Kaempi-

Apparently yes. Librarian John B. Henderson, Los Angeles, is quoted: "The development of TV directly conflicts with light-er fiction because it fills the demand for 'escape' formerly met by books. Nonfiction demand increased in 1950, 4.5 per cent, while fiction fell off 2.8 per cent. He further stated that one cause for increase in serious nonfiction reading is not TV but that "the public is seeking in-ner comfort of a spiritual nature."
