Elgin to Madison: 'Thanks'

By WILLIAM L. DOUDNA (State Journal Music Editor)

For some of the success of the Elgin (Ill.) Civic Symphony or chestra, give credit to Madison, Wis, and its program of civic music.

The Elgin organization gave its first concert

Apr. 17. It was so well received that the sponsors decided at once to provide for a season of four con-certs in 1951-52—probably two in Elgin and two in nearby communi-

Douglas Steensland, a member of the public schools music faculty from 1938 until last August (except a year at Juilliard and four years of army service), is the orchestra's conductor. Sceensland went to Elgin last fall to become band director of its school system. In Madison, he had been director of instrumental music in Central high school and teacher in West junior high Franklin, and Nakoma schools.

In addition, he had been flutist with the Madi-son Civic Symphony orchestra for 15 years; had studied conducting with Dr. Sigfrid Prager, former conductor of that organization, for two years; had been assistant to Prof. Raymond F. Dvorak, director of bands at the University of Wisconsin; had played in the university hand and orchestra, and had been on the staff of the university's summer music

When the opportunity to conduct the new civic orchestra arose in Elgin, Steensland was ready with experience in both music, as such, and civic music in particular.

The lute has a hollow pear-shaped body, and there are strings over one or more holes in its upper surface. The strings are plucked with the fingers.

The history of the lute goes back to the Orient. It seems to have been invented in India or Persia. Thirteen centuries ago, the Arabs played lutes probably having learned about them from the Persians.
