Johnston Favors Higher Tax Bill to Curb Inflation

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston said Monday the administration's $10,700,000,000 tax bill is a better inflation cure than the house-approved $7,200,000,000 tax hike proposal because it would hit the little fellow harder.

He told the senate finance committee that to fight inflation, the government must dig deep into the lower tax brackets because much of the income available for spending is located there.

Johnston told the senators that weakened wage-price controls would make his stabilization job much tougher, but "failure to provide adequate taxation would make the job almost impossible."

He said if inflation controls work, but taxes are not hiked enough, there will be an "inflationary gap" a year from now of $10,000,000,000 to $20,000,000,000—the difference between income available for spending and goods available to buy.

"The inflationary gap can be made up only by increased taxes and increased savings," he said.

"Otherwise the gap will sooner or later explode in inflated prices. Unless temporarily restrained by drastic price and wage controls, this could set off a new spiral of inflation."

The committee is considering both the administration's proposed tax bill and the house measure.

32 Write Tests for Appointments to Academies

A 3 1/2-hour civil service examination was given to 32 candidates for appointments to West Point and Annapolis academies Monday at the Madison postoffice.

Successful candidates in the test, a general aptitude and knowledge examination, will be allowed to take a further series of examinations later extending over three days.

Young men who successfully pass the three-day exam and subsequent tests will be eligible for appointment to either academy by a senator or congressman.

All those who took the Monday test were authorized by a senator or congressman. Civil service rules prohibit releasing names of examinees.

Testpapers of the 32 were sent Monday afternoon to Washington, D. C., where they will be graded at national civil service commission headquarters.

The group was one of the largest to be examined at the postoffice in Madison in recent years, officials said.

AP Man Gives 'Spy' Confession

Admits 'Espionage' to Czech Court

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia—(U.P.)—Associated Press (AP) Correspondent William N. Oatis, 37, an American citizen, said Monday he had spied on Communist Czechoslovakia.

Three other employees of the AP, all Czechs, pleaded guilty to espionage before a five-man state court in Pankraz prison.

No Formal Plea The four defendants, all held incommunicado for more than two months, took the stand Monday, the first day of their trial on charges of military, political, and economic espionage.

Oatis did not enter a formal plea of innocence or guilt, but answered "with a simple 'yes' when asked, 'did you carry out espionage?'"

Later he refused to admit prosecution allegations that he knew the alleged murderers of a Czech army officer, or that he had spied on army maneuvers.

In Frankfurt, official American sources released an account of the trial in which Oatis was described as "self-possessed, but pale and strained to a point almost unrecognizable. His answers were apparently memorized in advance. Oatis had apparently been denied his glasses, and was instructed not to look around at the spectators."

In London, Telepress, the official news agency of the Communist information bureau, said Oatis "spoke in a strong, clear voice, taking an active interest in the courtroom and turning continuously around to look over the spectators. Oatis astounded the court by his plea, which was both arrogant and cowardly."

Oatis took the stand after the reading of the indictment and testified until the noon recess. He was followed in the afternoon by his co-defendants, Thomas Svoboda, Pavel Woldinek, and Peter Muzik.

As each of the defendants finished his testimony, he told the court he was sorry for having worked against the "People's Democratic Republic."

Selected Audience The trial was watched by an audience composed of the Communist press and workers selected for special merit.

Vice-consul Richard Johnson, Long Island City, N. Y., and Mary Forak, New York, the official American observers, watched the proceedings from the back row of the big room. They were the only Westerners present.

Oatis' unemotional front cracked only once. That was when his voice broke as he identified U.S. Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs as a "further example" of the spies he knew to be operating in Czechoslovakia.

Although Oatis identified many Westerners as "spies," his testimony showed that "espionage" consisted mostly of keeping files of events and personalities, and exchanging what information they could obtain.
