Answer to Question No. 1 Probably false. This "survey of 1,500,000 passenger car operators" by an insurance com-pany reports that housewives "safer drivers than most truck drivers, lawyers, entertainers and traveling salesmen," while "bankers, farmers, clarks and teachers are next." Unless the company possesses evidence other than the relative number of accidents, the survey "don't tell nobody nothing." It tells nothing of the condition of the cars or roads, bad weather driving, etc. Such loose surveys in-jure sound investigation of one of our most important problems. How truck drivers come to be driving "pleasure cars" is a

Answer to Question No. 2
Yes, according to Dr. Bronowski, a British mathematician, who says that machines "can learn when they are provided with a mechanism for learning." Maybe scientists can create such a machine for college stu-dents. The students could stay at home and help dad and get a college education at the same time. Dr. Bronowski maintains that a machine "can learn by its mistakes" and play differently against a "timid" or "daring" chess player. All us laymen can say is: "We're from Missouri!"

Channel 11 Suggests Movie Stars Learn to Speak Russian

By VIRGINIA MACPHERSON

HOLLYWOOD, (U.P.) Dr. Sergei Bertensson, former director of the Moscow Art Theater, said today the best thing that could happen to the world would be to have girls like Lana Turner and Ava Gardner and Betty Grable learn to speak Russian.

And all the rest of the movie stars, too.

"The only way to get universal peace," he says, "is for people in America to learn to speak with people in Russia." Dr. Bertensson, who skipped just about the biggest big shot in Russia when it came to the theater. Until the Kremlin started messing up his plots, that is. When they tried to weasel politics into art he walked out and came to America.

Now he earns a living as dialogue director and technical adviser in the movies and teaches Russian at the Pacific School of Languages.
