NEW YORK, July 7. (P) Industrial output barely broke stride Norman Hall, 64, co-author of for the Independence Day observance this week. Production generally held at high levels, although materials restrictions and labor disputes took a toll of automobile assemblies.

Retail business continued to lag somewhat.

But a large volume of spending was indicated by the Federal Reserve Banks. They reported money in circulation climbed to

Output of electrical energy totaled 6,897,800,000 kilowatt hours in the latest reporting week, highest since March 17. And crude oil production still was high at a daily average of 6,099,350 barrels.

The imminence of cease-fire negotiations in Korea brought little change in the economic picture.

Stock market prices that took a nervous spill after the Russian truce proposal regained most of the lost ground. On Thursday the price average made its best rise of the year.

Inflation vs. deflation continued to be a prime argument. New warnings of inflation ahead were sounded in Washington where government officials sought tighter economic controls.

Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston said a weak controls law could cause a $1-a-day boost in living costs of every American family. Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson said present warehouse stocks will disappear and be hard to replace, as military
