Answer to Question No. 1 Women, probably, Psychologist Roy M. Dorcus had 50 men and 50 women select a friend of their own sex, check the person and also themselves as "average," "above," or "below" on numerous traits—recklessness, caution, reasoning ability, attractiveness to opposite sex, etc. With some exceptions, the women were slower in deciding most of the traits of both friends and themselves. They probably re-semble the old lady in one of Mrs. Wilkin's novels who said, "I make up my mind slow, but I make it up firm." Don't they, though?

Answer to Question No. 2 No. It is a sign of half-education, which is a most dangerous state. Mr. Anonymous says, "Absolute certainty is the privilege of uneducated minds—fanatics." I disagree with him on this point. Certainly is not the privilege of uneducated, but the privilege of uneducated, but the privilege of uneducated, but the privilege of uneducated but the privilege of uneducated. of half-educated minds. The lat-ter are certain about everything.

Answer to Question No. 3
Yes. First: because before long every other person will be 45 or more. Second: numerous experiments show that persons to 65 years of age loss very up to 65 years of age lose very little in accuracy or productive capacity. As a rule, older per-sons learn better from written than spoken instructions because they think slightly slower, but if given time to review in print if given time to review in print they comprehend just as well and in some cases, better.
