TIP O' THE MORNING: William Warfield's success in "Show Boat" already has him tabbed for at least one more major picture role. He's the man who sings "Ol' Man River."

On its annual visit to Madison—closest date to its home city, Baraboo—the Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey circus counted one of the biggest days of its 1951 season Wednesday. Attendance at two performances totaled 18,000 persons.

The matinee at the E. Washington ave. showgrounds attracted a near-capacity crowd, and the night show's attendance had the customers sitting on the grass of the hippodrome track—what the circus folk call a "straw house."

Kay Clarke, graduate of Madison East high school, was one of the top stars of the long and glittering performance, replacing Anjolette Conello in the No. 1 aerial act. Kay, with the ease of experience and the grace of a fairy, flew through the air in somersaults and turns, once trading places in midair with a man on the flying trapeze.

Miss Clarke, who had dozens of home-town visitors on the lot all day Wednesday, also appeared in two of the four spectacles. She was on the main float of the "Circus Serenade" and on a Spanish web in the aerial ballet, "Luawana." She was the girl who performed directly in front of Sections R and S.

Madison circus fans sent her a huge bouquet at the end of her act. All in all it was a thrilling and spectacular show, true to the Ringling-Barnum tradition of great size, expensive costuming, and new acts every season.

Less circusy than years ago, it still was, after all, the circus, despite the musical comedy atmosphere which has been growing during the past half-dozen seasons. While confirmed circus fans may not like it so well this way, the majority of the customers must prefer it, because circus managers are pretty smart business men and they give the showgoers what they like.

A quick rundown of the program shows these other highlights: Albert Rex's performing bears, gigantic children in their actions, apparently loving every minute of the dancing, sliding and acrobatics. Peterson's jockey dogs, often riding three-high atop poles.

The Riding Zoppes, with the indefatigable midget, Cuccolo, with his laugh-creating antics on top of horses and people, and with the skillful Zoppe in backward somersaults from running horse to running horse.

La Norma's whirlwind aerial act on the single trapeze, with neck and heel hanging and a spine-chilling drop to be caught by one knee; The ever-popular wire-walker, Hubert Castle, and his mirthful imitation of a drunk on the cable; Pinto del Oro's head stands on the high trapeze; Leon, on the high pole, which splits half-way up and swings him, head downward, within inches of the earth;

lent and sound motion pictures offered for loan by the university extension's bureau of visual instruction contains more than 2,500 titles with summary information on the content and learning goals of each film.

The aid of 1,200 teachers in communities all over Wisconsin was enlisted for previewing and selection of the new movies. This practice of seeking teacher judgments over the years has resulted in "a highly selective, functional film library for the use of Wisconsin schools, colleges, community, and adult groups," according to W. A. Wittich, director of the bureau.

The films are most abundant in the areas of the social studies, science, and language arts including reading readiness, grammar, and literature, he revealed. Individuals interested in obtaining the films on loan for class or group use may write to the University of Wisconsin bureau of visual instruction, 1312 W. Johnson st., Madison.

Mac Visits World Apple Center, Views Lakes, Peaks from Air

BY HAROLD E. McCLELLAND
State Journal Motor Editor
(10th in a Series)

WENATCHEE, Wash. — The Wenatchee valley is the "apple center of the world," but even when the apples are green a group of travel editors found plenty of other attractions in the city and area.

The day's tour started at the Ohme gardens, where every flower and shrub native to the area is growing and there's a beautiful view of the city and the ever-rushing Columbia river.

Then the editors drove north along the Columbia to Chelan, a 55-mile-long lake which Stewart L. MacKenzie, Cascadian hotel manager, likened to the Swiss Alps for scenery. We thought it looked like pictures of Loch Lomond, but we've never seen either, so MacKenzie wins.

The editors and MacKenzie were flown the length of the lake, which is 1,100 feet above sea level. The mountains rise to 9,000 feet, and the lowest 9,000 feet is 1,400 feet so within a matter of a few city blocks the elevation went from 9,000 feet above sea level to 300 feet below.

tion years ago you would have seen a waterfall many times greater than Niagara.

See Brand New Lake. As the travel editors approached Grand Coulee dam they spotted a brand new lake to their left, a new lake which will fill the Grand Coulee as a storage basin for water pumped from Lake Roosevelt behind the dam. The Grand Coulee extends for 25 miles, yet with only two pumps going residents find they can see the water rise week by week.

Didn't See a Badger. At Wenatchee, too, we "discovered" the Badger mountains. Just as in Wisconsin, we didn't see a single badger, but on a trip to the top we did see deer, porcupine, and a jackrabbit which seemed to take up the whole road.

Next the editors headed for Grand Coulee dam, and on the way found an old river bed of the Columbia, with lakes left by the receding river. Soap Lake, for instance, produces a sudsy froth which is enjoyed by bathers and sunbathers. Fishermen take over the other lakes.

Then, in the Grand Coulee, they came upon Dry Falls state park, where from the Vista house they saw a now-dry area which was once the greatest waterfall which is 1,100 feet above sea level. The mountains rise to 9,000 feet, and the lowest 9,000 feet is 1,400 feet so within a matter of a few city blocks the elevation went from 9,000 feet above sea level to 300 feet below.
