The Sunday Spotlight Livic Music's 26th Year

By WILLIAM L. DOUDNA (State Journal Music Editor) When Walter Heermann calls the Madison Civic lic next Sunday. chorus to order for rehearsal Monday night, he will be starting, officially, the city's 26th consecutive season of civic music activity. It's a fairly safe bet, for anyone who knows him, ple's concert. that Dr. Sigfrid Prager will be in Scanlan hall to This busi bear the organization which he founded, just as he probably will be there again Tuesday night when the Madison Civic Symphony or-chestra (another of his children) has its first rehearsal of the sea-Son. Dr. Prager arrived in Madison Å, last Monday, after a rugged an-plane trip from Argentina, his present home. Mrs. Prager, who for many years was a member of and often was, a soloist with the chorus, will arrive shortly after Oct. 1.

Heermann, who succeeded Prager as conductor of both organizations, is planning two major works especially of the Pro Arte quartet.) for the 1951-52 season. They are Handel's "The Luckily, we have conductors who are not afrai Messiah," whose Christmas-time production has be-to, give second performances. Too many director come a Madison tradition, and Brahms' "German are the kind willing and anxious (perhaps for th Requien.

Singers who want to join the chorus will be welcome at the first rehearsal, scheduled for 7:30 p. m. in the Madison Vocational school's new audi-forum. Men's voices are especially needed. Heermann said.

The orchestra will meet at the same hour Tuesday in the same hall. "There are openings in all sections of the orchestra," Heermann said, "but the string section would particularly welcome new members.

A third civic music event of the week will be the annual election of officers, to be held when the board of the Madison Civic Music assn. meets Wednesday noon.

Details of the season haven't been announced o ficially, but the schedule probably will be made pu

At least one innovation is on the books. This a contest for high school planists, with the winn to be soloist at the orchestra's annual young pe

This business of giving Madison musicians chance to be soloists in major concerts is one of the most important phases of the civic music activit It has been going on for years, although there has been a lot of fanfare about it. Members of the civit orchestra have stepped to the front as soloists, an members of the civic chorus have had both leadin and supporting roles in opera and concert. Another heartening aspect of the programmi has been the willingness on the part of both Prage and Heermann to include compositions of Madist writers in their concerts and to play seldom-hear work5 publicity valuel to have "first performances" be unwilling to let us hear a work the second timewhich, after all, is more important to the listen than the first, because he gets more out of it. * *

One never appreciates the value of fan mail to radio performer until he becomes one. The last couple of weeks have impressed its in portance on me once more, for I'm back on WIB, with a children's program at 4:45 p. m. Monda through Friday-and I like to know what the listen ers want to hear, and what they don't like.

With no audible audience reaction, we have depend upon letters and postcards for comment.

Sailing vessels make some per-sons dream of times gone by. Al-though some craft of that kind still sail the seas, we are in an age of power, and most long voyages are made by ocean vessels moved by propellers. Today I wish to go back to a time almost four centuries ago when a sea captain named John Hawkins was building up his name.
