HELP Prevent Fires! FIRE PREVENTION WEEK Oct. 7-13

Bill Doudna's SPOTLIGHT Brahms and Beethoven

TIP O' THE MORNING: Campus guessers are evenly divided on whether student board will get faculty approval for a Stan Kenton concert.

From Pianist Gunnar Johansen and the Pro Arte quartet, one has come to expect performances approaching perfection, which is the player is Kolsch, but this usage slowly vanished in succeeding sections, which moved from simple joy to frank frolicking.

Instrument Developed to Measure Radiation
CHICAGO — (AP) — A new type direct-reading survey instrument for measuring radiation intensity has been developed at the Argonne National Laboratory.

Dr. Francis R. Shonka, director of the laboratory's research and development division, said the new Argonne dosage-rate survey meter is the first direct-reading quartz fiber instrument developed for the detection and measurement of radiation.

The new Argonne meter measures radiation intensity from 0 to 100 milliroentgens an hour and when inverted measures radiation intensity from 0 to 50 roentgens an hour.

(Radiation dosage is measured in terms of a unit called the roentgen. The roentgen is a measurement of the total energy absorbed by a definite mass of air. A milliroentgen is 1/1000 of a roentgen.)
