During Asthma Attack

TIP O' THE MORNING: Whether Madison will see "Quo Vadis" before its regular release date will depend on many factors-including a choice of population figures. It wil be shown first in cities of more than 100,000 population, but information available doesn't specify the source from which the figure must come.

Albert Rahier's sterling performance of Chausson' "Poeme for Violin and Orchestra" and admirable playing by the University of Wisconsin Symphony orchestra gave a exciting afternoon to an audience in the Wisconsin Union theater Sunday.

Under the direction of Prof. Richard C. Church, the 195 52 orchestra topped almost anything the campus organization has ever done. The students played Beethoven's "Eroica" symphon with a quality seldom encountered in amateur orchestras, gave Rahie vivid support in the Chausson rhapsody, and played a virile versio of the prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg."

Rahier's playing was exactly right for the exacting music. H clean, pure tones stood out always against the background of the orchestra, even when the accompaniment was exclusively strings. He lent an air of mystery to the main theme's first playing, then broad ened the tone as the composer gave it an almost impassioned repet

Over the years, one has come to expect fine woodwinds, equal good brasses, and generally efficient strings in the University Synphony orchestra. But one fears, early in the season especially, for

This season. Church has developed (largely with new members a group of violinists with a discipline unbeaten by any university orchestra in this reviewer's memory. These students showed to that they are capable of exhibitanting tone, and in the "Eroice particularly they produced a great sweep of power.

This is not to say that the other sections were not up to parthey were. The horns, the cellos, and Oboeist Esther Sadowsky were especially good in the symphony, and the brasses had proper Wagne lan thunder in the prelude.

OPERA: Last week's performance of "Carmen" at th Capitol theater recalled to many the outstanding performance by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organizations at the Parkway theater by Madison's civic music organization organiza in November, 1933, and January, 1934. Dr. Sigfrid Prager was the conductor, and he had shown great foresight in selecting the man to sing Escamillo. He was Emery Darcy, then virtually unknown but now a leading member of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

Dr. Prager will lecture tonight on three forthcoming "Met" operas which will be broadcast. They are "I Pagliacci," "Cavalleria Rusticana," and "Mme. Butterfly."

He will speak at 8 in Music hall. Admission will be free.

TOP TUNES: "Down Yonder" was the favorite tune on Madison songs last week, a check on two available lists of top selections shows. One is "The Big Eight," complied by Leon Petterson on WISC; the other is WFOW's "Madison Hit Parade."

Here are the next 10. in order of popularity:

"Sin," second . . "Because of You," third . . . "Slow Polk," fourth . . . "Undecided" and "Cold, Cold Heart," tied for fifth and sixth . . "Just One More Chance" and "I Get Ideas." tied for seventh and eighth . . "Hey, Good Lookin'" and "Shrimp Boats," tied for ninth and tenth.
