ace, drawing East's last trump. When he then led the king of spades from dummy, Strouse had half decided to discard a heart. East had to follow suit with the queen of spades, however, and declarer could therefore afford to change his plans. He could now cash the king, jack, and eight of spades, discarding three diamonds from his own hand. Then he could give up one heart trick, and claim the rest.

The chief point of the successful line of play was that West's opening bid was so obviously psychic that it didn't necessarily locate the ace of diamonds in the West hand.
