

Radio Timetable MONDAY. Table with columns for WIBA, WISC, WKOW, WISN and rows for various radio programs and their times.

TIP OF THE MORNING: A Wisconsin woman is expected to be "Queen for a Day" on Jack Bailey's program at 10:30 a. m. today on Mutual-WISC.

The story is told of the painter whose friend scoffed, saying he painted unrecognizable subjects because he couldn't paint recognizable objects. So the artist spread the contents of his pockets on his dresser and made an almost photographic report on the scene.

Arnold Schoenberg appeared in somewhat the same light to many of the capacity audience at Music Hall Sunday night, when the Pro Arte quartet and two assisting artists—Violinist Beatrice Hagen and Cellist Walter Heermann—played the late, great composer's "Transfigured Night."

Here was recalled, to those of us who had almost forgotten it, the sheer beauty, the Wagnerian drama, the moving poetry in the music which Schoenberg wrote in 1893 when he was 25 years old.

The individuality which marks the Schoenberg in Madison knew best was there, too, but in smaller quantity and in less obvious fashion.

The performances of this and the other works on the program were marked by fidelity to the music's spirit, flexible interpretation, and the feeling of ensemble perfection which the quartet almost invariably shows.

The other compositions were Mozart's "Quintet in C Major," with its lyric andante movement and happy finale, and Brahms' "Quartet in C Minor," highly unified through its interchange of themes, but restless and protesting in its overall effect.

Despite the emphasis on ensemble, one must mention Violinist Rudolf Kolisch's soaring song in the quintet and the wealth of quality in Cellist Ernst Fiedler's solo passages in "Transfigured Night."

The quartet's next concert will be at 8:30 p. m. Jan. 11 in the Wisconsin Union theater, with Pianist Gunnar Johansen joining it in the Franck piano quintet.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT: The Tudor Singers will give their annual Christmas dinner concert Sunday, Dec. 16, in Tripp Commons of the Memorial Union, chairman Ken Reich of the Union committee has announced.

This group of students and alumni was organized to "sing for fun" 16 years ago under Prof. Edgar B. Gordon.

The 1951 concert will include, "Envoy," by Carl Mueller; three madrigals, "Through Amaryllis and Dance," by William Byrd, "Which is the Properest Day To Sing," by Thomas Arne, and "Nymph and Swain," by Will Macfarlane; two songs with string accompaniment, "Orpheus with His Lute," by Edward German, and "Nocturne: How Beautiful the Night," by Perch Fletcher; "Night Song," by J. Rheinberger; "Step Lightly, Step Softly," by Underwood; "Oh, Can Ye Sew Cushions," arranged by Bantock, and a group of Christmas songs.

After the concert a community sing of Christmas songs will be held. Reservations for the dinner concert will be accepted at the Union boxoffice beginning at noon today.

'FLDERMAUS' PREVIEW: A "preview" discussion of the opera "Fledermaus" will be given by Prof. Ronald E. Mitchell, of the University of Wisconsin department of speech, at 7:30 tonight in Great Hall of the Memorial Union.

"Fledermaus," by Johann Strauss, will be staged to a sell-out audience at 8 p. m. Friday in the Wisconsin Union theater, and Mitchell's discussion has been arranged by the Wisconsin Union music committee to provide background information on the popular revival to patrons who will attend the production and to anyone else who may be interested. The program is free.

Dali Gives Up Surrealism for Religious Themes. LONDON (AP) — Spanish Artist Salvador Dali Sunday declared himself done with the surrealism that made him famous.

He said there would be no more paintings of limp and dripping watches and no more sleeping in silk-lined clouds.

Now, he said, he is a mystic, primarily concerned with religious themes. Dali said his "new realm" is the soul in religion and the love of God he sees the only hope for mankind.

Dali arrived in London Saturday night from Pt. Lligat, the Spanish village where he lives and paints.

With him he brought a product of the "new realm"—a painting of Christ on the cross floating in darkness above sea-sashed rocks, seen in short perspective from a point high directly over the top of the cross.

The 47-year-old artist said: "We used to regard psychology as the big problem. But now religion and physics are more vital problems."
