WASHINGTON, Dec. 14. (4P)

with Ed Wynn on the telephone regarding his last week's television show, which, incidentally was a good one. It was smooth, easy going, not a bit hard to intently watch, relaxing and none of the high-geared frustration which is prevalent on some of the other comedy shows.

Main reason for the call was drawings were made to produce the cartoon shorts and excerpts to be seen in the Christmas special TV show on CBS by Walt Disney . . . Bob Hawk reports that his Palm Springs home is between a maternity hospital and a cemetery, where he can watch 'em come and go!

is prevalent on some of the other comedy shows.

Main reason for the call was to find out about his shoes. Because of a broken foot, Ed was considering not wearing the factor of the shoes with him on the stage, screen, radio and television for the past 44 years.

"I'm not superstitious," he told, me, "but something about the tradition of the shoes hit me, and I couldn't appear without if them." Fact is, Ed had to go to a lot of trouble in order not to break the "good luck" charm of the shoes. With the help of the American Orthopedic Co., he had a moccasin rigged up with a steel shaft built in, which he wore, with the old battered size 13 worn over this.

"I had jokes all set up about my limping," he said, "but after taking a couple of pills to ease the pain of stepping on the foot out of a cast (still broken), I didn't use them. I felt a sharp pain only once during the hour's show."

wynn first wore his famous shoes in April, 1907, when he was playing in vaudeville at Keith's theater in Pittsburgh. He has never done a performance without them since, and even now, with a broken foot, the tradition carries on. Now insured for $5000, the shoes originally cost $3.50.

Since then, the shoes have been repaired and patched until there is none of the original leather left. Ed estimated that it has cost him at least $3000 in the past 44 years to keep them in shape for his performances.
In closing, Ed gave me an ad-Dec. 22, he will return the Danny Thomas favor and do a walk-on during Danny's Tviewer. He will also be "The Madhatter" during the CBS "Radio Theater" presentation of "Alice in Wonderland," Dec. 24. Your old Radio or Small Screen TV Set Now! DRIVE-IN
