JACOBY ON BRIDGE

- By Oswald Jacoby -

The bridge tournament in St. Paul next weekend is called a win-ter carnival, perhaps because the local players expect to have a carnival playing rings around all the out-of-town experts. It wouldn't surprise me if they did just that, for Minneapolis and St. Paul have about as many bridge stars to the square foot as you're likely to find in any part of the country.

Just to give you an idea of how they play, I submit today's hand—played recently by Ed Burns of Minneapolis.

The gravel pile was at the Builders Supply Co. It was heaped up over a pit so that it could be dropped into trucks. Officials said the gravel was moist and loose.

Several rairoad employes nearby heard Jerry scream for help as he went down and rushed to aid with the digging.

The college of engineering and the courge or engineering and the departments of economics and political science at the University of Wisconsin have joined forces to present for the first time at the university a seminar in "river basin planning."

Little Ferry Green was taken to St. Joseph's hospital unconscious but with a faint heart hear. The hospital-emergency ward reported that the boy died shortly after admittance.

He had been playing on top of the gravel pile when an engineer on a passing train saw him disapper into the loose stones.

The engineers turned his train over to the fireman and began digging in the pile.

Nearby workmen joined the effort and 18 men from a fire department rescue squad pitched in.

Some 400 persons, many of them anxious parents who feared the boy might be theirs pressed around the scene and had to be held back by police lines.

Authorities said the milling crowd churned up the gravel and made the digging task more difficult.
