FILM FARE: Edith Gwynn, State Journal correspondent, writes from Hollywood.

All that stuff about Metro looking for a "young June Allyson" (huh?) for the lead in "Flymouth Adventure" is confusing. Actually as of this writing, Deborah Kerr is still the femme star with Spencer Tracy and Van Johnson. What the studio searches for is no doubt an ingenue type to play opposite Van.

This we must tell you—and with the hope that it will give delinquent donors a twinge: After his accident during the war, Van Johnson wasn't permitted to donate any blood, but since 1946 V. J. has contributed at the Blood Bank 14 times! V. J. didn't tell us this—but a friend who ran into him there t'other day, did!

With more rain due around here, Bob Hope's crack during the last storm may be in order again. He told the boys in blue at Point Magu, "I saw four tourists, clutching their sun-glasses, go under for the third time . . . and now I know why Cadillacs have fin-tails and Buicks have port-holes".

Latest entry for a movie career is Patricia Banfield, who once fought bulls in Mexico and also managed a series of exhibitions along those lines. She makes her screen debut with a part in "It Grows on Trees", with Irene Dunne, Joan Evans, et al.

Gloria Folland, appearing here now in "Mr. Roberts," is the wife of Tod Andrews, who stars in the erstwhile Henry Fonda role.

Lana Turner thinks she'll go to France and Italy next month—and perhaps meet Fernando Lamas along the way. But then, Lana thought she was going to take detter, Cheryl to Switzerland for the winter, too. Won't surprise us if she stays right in Hollywood.

Fine actor, Arthur Kennedy, finis with "This Man Is Mine" is off to N. Y. to gab about a play. Then he goes to Europe.

Jane Powell continues her night-club career with a fling at N. Y.'s famed Copacabana starting mid-February. Then dashes back here to start "Small Town Girl".

Gordon Mac Crae opens his singing stint at the Cocoanut Grove Jan. 31—before co-starring with Doris Day in "April in Paris". Roger Dann, at this point, is being tested (but not yet signed) for a featured spot in "Paris".
