FANTASTIC world in which madness was saner than sani-A ty came to life Tuesday night at the Wisconsin Union theater when Wisconsin Players gave the first of five performances of "The Madwoman of Chaillot."

In the vast cast, there was little left undone in proper characterization and costuming, and Jonathan Curvin had done a superior job in handling the almost constant movement of many players in the first act, set in a Parisian cafe. His direction stood up equally well in the more intimate second act, laid in the cellar home of Countess Aurelia, the madwoman of Chaillot.
