Police Chief in Nebraska

O'NEILL, Neb. — (UP) — The veteran police chief of this Nebraska cattle town was shot to death Friday and angry fellow officers said the killer may have been an "amateur" burglar who had been arrested for a $10 robberv.

been an all all tracks.

The body of Chet Calkins, 51. a "firm dealer with anyone who brushed with the law," was found in his auto parked in a dark alley carly Friday morning. His gun was still in his holster and a flashlight was in his hand.

Brother Finds Bedy
His brother, town Marshall Walter Calkins, found the body.
He said Calkins apparently was bringing in a man who had broken into a store a short time before.

Calkins died from several bullet wounds in the heart. Sheriff Leo Tomjack said the killing was "amateurish." He said the burgar had smashed a window pane to get in the Shelhamer Implement Co. store and take $10.

But the rear door had been rebolted and oficers said Calkins apparently had surprised the burglar, arrested him, and started to take him to jail. An eary-morning snow covered all tracks.
