Records: Haydn to Hampton

Recent recordings, recommended by this department, range from the familiar Haydn "Surprise" symphony to Berg's opera, "Wozzeek."

Here, briefly, are reports on some which I like or which I think are good even if they aren't subor which I think are kood even it they aren't subject to immediate affection:

Haydn: "Symphonies 94 and 103," recorded by Sir Thomas Beecham and the Royal Philharmonic schestra (Columbia) . . . The "Surprise" and "Drum

Roll" symphonies are performed noil" sympnonies are performed so that a sense of animation joins their innate charm. These are Beecham at his best, as clean and lively as his Mozart.

Rimsky-Korsakow: "Coq d'Or" suite, recorded by Beecham and suite, recorded by Beecham and the Royal Philharmonie (Colum-bia) . . This gay and brilliantlybia) . . . This gay and brilliantly-hued score is less successfully captured than the Haydn symphonics, perhaps because of a less lively mechanical reproduction. It is paired on an LP disc with dashing performance of Franck's "Le Chasseur Maudit," by far the best recording yet of this tone poem.

tone poem.

Berg: "Wozzeck," recording by Dimitri Mitropolous and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestrs, with Elicen Farrell, Mack Harrell, Joseph Mordino, and others (Columbia)... An exciting performance of a seldom-heard opera, recorded with engineering excellence in Carnegle hall. Harrell repeats the impression he gave in his Madison recital—that of a highly sensitive, musically knowing artist polous and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra, with Elicen Farrell, Mack Harrell, Joseph Mordino, and others (Columbia). # He's Heard and Not Seen

Certain birds are easy to hear and others which were named but hard to see. Among such birds, the whippoorwill stands out. Whippoorwills are common in many sections of castern Canada, and the United States has a good supply of them in states from Melraska to New York. For every person who has seen one of the birds, it is probable that at least a hundred have heard the song.

Does the whippoorwill have a song? Answers to that question may differ. Probably the female thinks that her mate. or future mate, the mate the places where it lives. A song? Answers to that question may differ. Probably the female thinks that her mate. or future mate, the places where it lives. A song and the singing of casters, and the whippoorwill is hardly likely to be in the related that the bird was singing of the whippoorwill named itself, it cries, "Whip poor Will," and we hear the sounds over and over again.
