South saved two spades and two diamonds in the dummy. He next led a low spade to dummy's ace and returned the jack of diamonds. East had to cover with the king (since otherwise South would discard), whereupon South ruffed.

Declarer now led a spade, and East was forced to win with the king of spades. East now had to lead 'a diamond to dummy's 10, thus giving declarer his eighth Albert E. White got married 25 years ago after they saved up a modest sum.

After a day of searching, they decided the money had been burned up in the trash Monday morning. They theorized it had dropped into trash that Mrs. White gathered and burned.

But, the only thing they have left, too, and only occasionally saw a movie at a neighborhood theater.

After a day of searching, they rolled.

The order was founded in Europped into trash that Mrs. White gathered and burned.

But, the only thing they have left, too, of their life saving.

Very few part score contracts develop exciting situations. It may be difficult to make seven or eight tricks, but difficulty and excitement are not necessarily the same. In today's hand, however, I think we have the exception—an exciting hand played at only two clubs. The end situation is very wu-usual and I suspect that most play-ers will not foresee it even though they can see all of the cards.

When North opened the bidding with one spade, South toyed with the idea of raising to two spades. He finally decided that his hand was too strong for a simple raise; and he therefore temporized by
