

TIP O' THE MORNING: "Roundy" Coughlin, State Journal sports columnist who broadcasts weekly on WIBA and WIBA-FM, will be listed in "Who's Who in TV and Radio," to be issued in September.

A FOUR-PART series assessing U. S. foreign policy in western Europe will be broadcast by NBC-WIBA and WIBA-FM beginning at 8:30 tonight. The half-hour documentaries, with Leon Pearson as narrator, will be called "Who Goes There?"

Pearson, NBC's United Nations correspondent, travelled through France and Germany for six weeks gathering facts for the series. He interviewed cabinet ministers and foreign office officials as well as farmers and factory workers in both nations.

Aided by NBC field engineer George Robinson, who took 12 trunks of latest-model tape recording equipment on the trip, Pearson covered Western Europe from barnyards to the new Krupp plant in Essen, seeking the answers to two questions which concern every American: Are we right in giving aid to the Germans? Are we right in assuming leadership in the defense of Europe?

The answers to these and other searching questions on American anti-communist policy in Europe will be heard on the "Who Goes There?" series. Titles of the four half-hour programs are: "American Occupation in France," "The French-German Conflict," "Who Goes There?" and "We Can't Go Home."

Pearson has attended Big Four conferences in Moscow and Paris, is a chevalier of the French Legion of Honor, and has covered the United Nations since its formation.

Robinson has covered numerous disasters, bulletin-making special event broadcasts and grassroots coverage of important states during primary elections this Spring.

REMINDER: The annual Salon of School Art will close at noon Saturday. You have until then to see the exciting collection of Madison children's work in Scantlan hall.

CONTEST: For the second time in less than a week, Donald E. Soule has won an award in the field of drama.

On Sunday, he received the Wisconsin Players' citation for his performance in the title role of "King John."

On Thursday, he received second place and a check for $125 in the same organization's National Playwriting contest. His play was "The Casualties."

First prize of $250 went to Nancy W. Henderson, University of North Carolina, for "Lo, the Angel."

No third prize was given, but the judges awarded honorable mentions to Joana Semel, Bryn Mawr college; Elmer Oettinger, University of North Carolina, and William Durkee, Stanford university.

More than 20 entries were received, but only 19 were eligible for consideration under contest rules.

Final judges were John E. Dietrich, G. N. G. Orsini, Paul L. Wiley, and Jonathan W. Curvin, all of the University of Wisconsin faculty.

FROM FILMLAND: Edith Gwynn, The State Journal's Hollywood correspondent, writes...

Margaret O'Brien, out of all but television pictures for the past few years, is suddenly swamped with more movie offers than any could accept in the next few months.

Margaret, of the good-looking teenager set, is top choice for the lead with Spencer Tracy in his next, "Years Ago." Then she goes to Hal Wallis for both "House of Mist" and "Sound of Years," if she can squeeze these in before doing the Broadway show, "The Intruder," come fall. This may cause Maggie to bow out of that Japanese film she's supposed to do in Tokyo ("American Girl in Japan") next month.

Uta Hagen, once wed to Jose Ferrer, is having hectic hours with actor Herbert Berghof.

Frank Fontaine will add his own brand of comedy to "Scared Stiff," the new Martin and Lewis picture. By the way, a report that Mac ("The Killer") Gray went on tour with Dean and Jerry as their "bodyguard" is utter baloney. Mack went along to promote Dean's records with disc jockeys, etc. The boys say he did a swell job.

Leatrice Joy, beautiful queen of silent movies, opens at the Pasadena Playhouse June 5 in "Life with Mother." She looks wonderful. The years have left no mark on her... The weather (and fog) being what it is hereabouts, everyone's knowing "Where there's smog, there's fire!" And somebody cracked, "There are so many television aerials in and around Los Angeles, the smog is coming in shredded!"

Ken-Tobey is taking bows as a better-than-amateur painter, and has already sold some canvases. Why someone hasn't "sold" Ken for pictures lately, is hard to fathom. A small actor—which he surely proved in "The Thing" and other things.

Greer Garson is back in town. But don't bet she'll do "My Mother and Mrs. McChesney." Greer doesn't even want to play the kind of a part the story calls for.

Betty Hutton wails. "I must be getting old. I was walking down Hollywood Boulevard yesterday and had the uncomfortable feeling that I wasn't being followed!"

Betsy Drake and spouse Cary Grant won't both be working under the same M.G.M. roof soon, as supposed. Cary will be there co-starring with Deborah Kerr in "Dream Wife," but the role offered Betsy opposite Howard Keel in "The Desperate Search" has been turned down by her. Incidentally, this dramatic lead gives Keel the switch we told you he'd been begging for when he asked boss-man Dore Schary to take him out of musicals for a while and let him "go straight."

"EDGAR," "Dragnet," the NBC radio series starring Jack Webb as Police Sgt. Joe Friday, has been chosen as the best radio mystery program of 1951 in a nationwide vote of the Mystery Writers of America, it was announced by Will Oursler, executive vice-president of the organization.

The Edgar Allan Poe award in that category thus goes to "Dragnet" for the second successive year. Mitchell Benson, an executive of the NBC program department, accepted as "Edgar" (a porcelain bust of Poe) for the program at the Mystery Writers of America awards dinner in New York recently. Duplicate awards will be presented in Hollywood to Jack Webb, the show's director-star and to Jim Moser, who writes the scripts, based on cases from official police files.

"Dragnet" began on NBC radio June 3, 1949.

NOTES: Marvin Miller, announcer on NBC radio's "Show Train," has been signed to narrate a navy training film, of which he made more than 100 during World War II.

It was reunion time on "Welcome Travelers" recently when host Tommy Bartlett saw Johnny Aitchison of Glendale, Calif. They had first met three years ago at a theater in Heidelberg, Germany, where Johnny was a GI and Tommy headed an entertainment troupe.

Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis are brushing up on their golf, with the intention of challenging Bing Crosby and Bob Hope in a charity match. Martin shoots in the 70s, but Lewis is fairly new to the game.

Madison FEATURE: "Miracle in Milan." TYPE: Fantasy. REVIEWER: Bill Doudna.

STORY: Found in a cabbage patch and raised in an orphanage, Toto gravitates to a hobo jungle on Milan's outskirts. There he rallies the inhabitants, brings some order from its chaos, and meets a wily and deceiving man of wealth when oil appears on the premises.

His foster mother appears from Heaven, gives him a magical dove. With its help, he gives his fellow what they want and raises hob with his silk-hatted foe.

HIGH POINTS: Producer Vittorio de Sica's limitless sense of fantasy, always as illogical as fantasy can be... The Italian players' utterly serious approach to their characterizations... The absence of moralizing, bitterness, and reason.

LOW POINTS: Transitions in time and place are sometimes awkward—but often this is true in dreams, too.

VERDICT: Highly enjoyable if you like fantasy.
