Orpheum

FEATURE: Scaramouche TYPE: Swashbuckling drama. CAST: Andre Moreau, Stewart Granger, Lenore, Eleanor Parker, Aline DeGavrilac, Janet Leigh, Marquis DeMayne, Mel Ferrer. REVIEWER: Wally Wickoff. STORY: Sabatini's witty romance, bolstered by technician and the range of modern filming is the story of the lusty actor-swordsmen. Moreau, who pledges over the body of his best friend to avenge his death at the hands of France's great swordsman, the Marquis DeMayne. Sometimes disguised as the clown, Scaramouche, he hides his time until sufficiently trained as a swordsman himself. Meanwhile, thinking the woman he met by chance and fell in love with is his real sister, he finds it difficult to explain his interest in his stage partner, the fiery Lenore (who also loves him in her spiritive way). Spritting the marquis in a theatre box, Moreau, alias Scaramouche, begins what has been billed as the longest sword duel in film history (8 minutes). HIGH POINTS: Fast-moving witty plot with plenty of action and twists in the story. Magnificent costuming. Granger, the rugged here of "King Solomon's Mines," performing a long-lost sister in distress, of foes seeking the hand of same sister, length of the big duel is isn't wearing and ends unexpectedly. LOW POINTS: The old French novel form of the hero finding

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby

What sort of bridge hand makes you think of fireworks? Probably a slam. But not just an ordinary slam, expertly bid and played. Let's take a look at a slam that shouldn't have been bid. Certainly there's nothing much to recommend in the slam contract shown in today's hand. Experts should stay out of a slam when the opponents have two aces. But when this hand came along in the Decoration Day tournament in New York, most of the North-South pairs staggered into six no-trump. In a way, it's not to be wondered at. The defense had just two bare aces between them, not a jack more. By way of compensation, North had a good five-card suit, and South had an even better one. If the defense had held about the same value—but not in the form of two aces—the slam might have been too cold because of the strength of the red suits. I wouldn't compare this slam to fireworks if it were just an unlucky hand that was set because the defenders had two aces. The astonishing thing about it is that most of the experts who bid the slam managed to make it. At most tables, West opened a club, and South won with the jack. He then led a diamond, hoping that somebody would take the ace and would return anything but a spade. Then he might make four diamonds, five hearts and three clubs. As things turned out, however, West played a low diamond at the second trick, and dummy won with the king. East's nine-spot now indicated quite a different way of playing the hand. There was a good chance that East had no more diamonds, and there might be good luck in spades. So most of the experts now shifted to spades, and East could do nothing to defeat the contract. He could take his ace of spades whenever he liked, but he couldn't lead a diamond to his partner's ace. South managed to win three spades, five hearts, one diamond and three clubs. Twelve tricks even though the defenders each held an ace.

Bill Douma's SPOTLIGHT Robert Weede

TIP OF THE MORNING: If music cycles are still operating normally, you'll find a trend toward quieter singing and orchestrations starting in August.

ONLY ONE CONCERT will be presented by the Wisconsin Union music committee this summer, and that will be Robert Weede's at 8 p. m. Friday, July 18. The baritone will sing in the Wisconsin Union theater.

Mail orders for tickets are being received now at the theater boxoffice. James Woenkuff is chairman of the sponsoring committee.

MIDNIGHT SHOW: A special advance showing of "The Winning Team," based on the life of Grover Cleveland Alexander, has been booked for Saturday at the Capitol theater. The picture will be screened after the regular show, and special admission tickets are now being sold. "The Winning Team" stars Doris Day, Ronald Reagan, and Frank Lovejoy.

MUSIC CLINIC: Registrations for the All-State high school band are 50 per cent above last year's, despite a decrease in registration at the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point. More than 300 boys and girls will attend the summer session, Director Emmett Sarik has announced.

INSTITUTE: Anyone interested in the teaching of music theory and history in high school and colleges may attend next week's three-day institute without payment of fees, Chairman Leland Hilmar Luckhardt is chairman. Members are Prof. Helene Bloz, Coon of the University of Wisconsin music school said Thursday. Registration will begin at 9 a. m.

FEATURE: Tembo. TYPE: Adventure in true life. CAST: Howard Hill and other members of his African safari. REVIEWER: Eleanor Shefferman. STORY: This picture was produced and directed by Howard Hill, considered one of the greatest archers in the world. One of the members of his hunting party took the glorious technicolor motion picture. The picture follows Hill and his party on their nine-months trip through the interior of the African continent in search of the vicious tribe of Leopard-men. Hill, armed only with a bow and arrow, faces some of the jungle's deadliest animals—python, man-eating crocodile, leopard, elephant, and many others—and comes out the victor. Some of the film's most exciting moments come when the Leopard men meet up with the safari finally meets up with the Leopard men. HIGH POINTS: Hill's stalking of the man-eating crocodile who had just swallowed one man alive... the expert shots made by Hill with his bow and arrow... the friendly rivalry that develops when members of the party each think that his pet is the best, the pets being a lion cub, a monkey and a zebra colt... the authentic native African dances performed by some of the tribes. VERDICT: If you like adventure, and excitement in your film fare, don't miss this picture. It is authentic from beginning to end, and no tame or compounded animals were used—the animals you see taken to get some of the close-up shots in the picture and for you hunters, there are a few lessons to be derived from Hill's prowess as an archer.

Monday in the lobby of Music hall. Coon will open the institute Monday morning. Themes and speakers each day will be: Monday — Teaching of theory and appreciation in high schools; Donald B. Cuthbert, Memorial high school, Beloit; Merrill high school, Beloit; Charles R. Hamilton, George Washington high school, Indianapolis, Ind.

Tuesday — Vocational school methods, theory and history background for music majors, college curricula and teaching methods; Walter Heermann, Madison Vocational and Adult school; Milton Rusch, Milwaukee State college; Norman Phelps, Ohio State university; Sister Mary Francesco, Viterbo college, La Crosse. Wednesday — Theory and history teaching methods in colleges, by extension, and by correspondence; Willard Robb, Lawrence college, Appleton; Helene Bloz and Verne Reynolds, University of Wisconsin; G. Lloyd Schultz, state department of public instruction. The conference will be conducted by the music school's history-committee, of which Prof. Hilmar Luckhardt is chairman. Members are Prof. Helene Bloz, Irene Eastman, and Cecil Burleigh and Instructors Robert Crane and Verne Reynolds.
