Radio Gets Set for Election

By WILLIAM L. DOUDNA (State Journal Radio Editor) If you think that radio went all out on covering the 1952 presidential nominating conventions, wait-'ul you hear what it's planning for the 1952 presidential election.

. In the first place, the roster of reporters, commentators, analysts, correspondents, and other own-ers of radio voices will read like "Who's Who in show the second place, two of the networks will in-shall electronic brains in their headquarters to help speed up compilations of results.

This will be in addition to the us-ual array of automatic calculators and high-speed humans. Virtually continuous broadcasting of returns and comments will begin on all networks at 7 p_c ²m. Madison/time and will con-tinue as far into the night as is necessary to make results contain Bésides carrying reports on the presidential election, the networks will broadcast reports on gubernatorial and congressional races

(NBC) reports will be carried in Madison by WIBA and the Colum-bia Broadcasting System (CBS) reports by WKOW.' While no Madison station will broadcast the Mu-tual Broadcasting System (MBS) accounts, other total and be head here probably will do so. tual broadcasting system (hBS) accounts, other stations which can be heard here probably will do so. As for television, three of the networks—ABC, CBS, and NBC—will have their reporters alternating between radio and TV. Mutual has no television network. The schedules will be similar to those on radio. NBC's electronic brain will be the Monrobot;

CBS will use the Univac. Wayne Oliver of the Asso-ciated Press describes them thus:

"The electronic robot brains will be able in a matter of seconds to make calculations and an-alyses that would take hours by conventional methods. They will take the returns at a given methods. They will take the returns at a given hour-or from a given percentage of precincts-and compare them with those at the same point in the counting four and eight years ago. "Then they will predict the final results, taking into account the changes in trends that have occurred in late results in past years.
