Election Coverage and Art

Because of commercial contracts negotiated by the networks, the stations had to handle their localized stories with too little time. How they managed to pack as much information as they did into five minute and three-minute periods after taking out more time for local advertising - is cause for

One will grant the greater importance of the national election, but what most listeners want more of is news of their own states and counties. In most cases, there was no opportunity for the stations to five precinct counts or analyses of how the vote was going in city and county, and little for state

I listened most to the CBS report, and found that Bob Trout's reporting was as calm and factual, and yet as interesting as it had been at the two national conventions.

The same goes for Merrill Mueller's handling of the returns on NBC.

The ABC network, with John Daly doing the chore in a similar vein, permitted one sad error. Apparently it was carrying duplicate reports on radio and television, and announcers' references to what TViewers could see on their screens was disconcerting, to say the least, to radio listeners, Because an assignment took up a good shore of Because an assignment took up a good share of my evening, I spent less time than usual beside the radio, and have no report to make on Mutual's efforts. However, advance information on that networks plans indicated that its stations would be hampered, too, by having little time for their own coverage.

Enough for the past, Let's look a bit at the fu-couple of viceks, both worth your attention. One is the Orville Bulman show, which will open with a show.

The other is the 18th Wisconsin Salon of Art always an exciting collection of works by Badger artists. It will open Nov. 18,

It is a unique exhibition—the largest show in the country in which all the work is done by er and Like It," the Rev. Alfred students. They plan the whole thing, appoint the W. Swan, judges, hang the pictures, place the sculpture, prepare the catalog, handle the opening reception, and publicize the event.

and publicize the event.

The salon was a student's idea in the first place. He was John Kienitz, now professor of art history at the University of Wisconsin. Kienitz was chairman of the Wisconsin Union gallety committee in 1934, and he decided that, with the comparatively new Memorial Union offering a suitable place for an exhibition, his committee should sponsor a statewide show to give the public a chance to see Wisconsin artists' output.

The committee, with the help of Union Director Porter Butts, made up a list of 500 Wisconsin artists by studying catalogs, newspapers, and alumni lists, and sent out invitations to exhibit. The letters brought in 260 entries, of which 99 were accepted for showing. The show grew steadily, and in 1944 reached a record entry list of 500 works which has never been topped.

World War II caused a slump in entries to 250 in 1944, but since that they have risen steadily. Last year's show say 258 works accepted.

Many of Wisconsin's best known contemporary artists received their first recognition at the Salon.

Others who won awards in later shows were John Wilde, Sylvia Fein, James Watrous, Charles LeClair, and Dudley (WCN): "The Meaning of the Humpler."
