

TIP O' THE MORNING: The Rev. Max Jordan, who was a noted foreign correspondent before he entered the priesthood, will be the December speaker on NBC-WIBA'S "Catholic Hour," heard Sundays at 1 p.m.

EVERY AUTUMN for five years, the Saturday Review has polled the country's record reviewers on their opinions about the disc output of the year. Their choices of outstanding records can serve as a compact guide for buying records as Christmas gifts.

Editor Irving Kolodin of the magazine's record department prefaces his report on the 1952 survey with this comment:

Half a decade of sampling critical opinion for this yearly purpose has convinced me that, where enthusiasm for their calling is concerned, few groups can show more than the country's record critics—a group, incidentally, of increasing influence, perceptions, and numbers. The budget-ridden buyer may add a mental aside that anyone could muster enthusiasm when the matter involved comes without cost and serves as the adjunct of a livelihood. But let us not forget obligations as well as privileges: if the average buyer had to listen to all the records he didn't like in order to have, without cost, the few that he did like, he might have some reservations himself.

Arturo Toscanini's recording of Beethoven's ninth symphony (Victor) was the choice of more than half the reporting reviewers as the No. 1 LP of the year.

Selection of the "favorite LP of all years" was varied. Your reviewer chose Columbia's "Don Juan in Hell." Others listed were the complete issue of the Beethoven quartets by the Budapest quartet; Dinu Lipatti's playing of Grieg and Schumann concertos; the Toscanini version of the Beethoven ninth; Sir Thomas Beecham's recording of Tchaikovsky's "Capriccio Italien," and Noel Coward-Ogden Nash version of "The Carnival of Animals."

Besides these, various critics listed these 1952 recordings in various categories:

- Toscanini: Brahms' "Symphony No. 4," "La Mer," "La Boheme." Eugene Ormandy: "Symphonie Fantastique." Erich Kleiber: "Symphony No. 9," Beethoven. Felix Weingartner: "Symphony No. 9," Beethoven. Benny Goodman: "Jazz Concert No. 2." Billy May: "Big Band Bash." Woody Herman: "Woody Herman at the Philharmonic." Metropolitan Opera: "Cosi Fan Tutte." Dimitri Mitropoulos: "Wozzeck." Lipatti: Chopin "Waltzes." Bach: The cantatas.

There were others, too—"Lulu," "Erwartung," the Cetra-Soria "Don Carlo," and Victor's "Gold Age" reissues.

Kolodin completes his report thus:

"One certainty may be appended as summation: anyone who buys, or gets as a gift, any musical work or performance mentioned in this compilation can confidently expect accomplishment on a superlative level. It is a remarkable thing, when one polls expert opinion and asks for answers in terms of 'outstanding,' how little that is meretricious or second rate is even mentioned, let alone agreed upon."

ON THE AIR: Pastors who will appear on "Your Pastor Speaks," the all-faith religious program broadcast over WIBA nightly at 10:15, have been announced for next week as follows:

Monday, the Rev. Henry Heland, Lutheran, St. Peter's; Tuesday, the Rev. Joseph Washington, Mt. Zion Baptist; Wednesday, the Rev. Merrill R. Abbey, First-University Methodist; Thursday, the Rev. Arnold Lehman, St. Bernard's; and Friday, the Rev. F. I. Schmidt, Bethel Lutheran.

KEEP THAT ACCENT: Toughest job facing Romney Wheeler, NBC's chief correspondent in London, is maintaining an American accent for his trans-Atlantic news reports.

"We have to fight night and day to keep American pronunciations," Wheeler says, "and even when we think we're talking like the folks at home, a broad A slips in. My friends in the States listen to my NBC broadcasts and warn me when I begin to go astray."

Wheeler has many other problems besides keeping his native twang. In Britain he serves as the network correspondent, representative, public relations man, TV film producer, and host for visiting dignitaries. There are quite a few. Basically, Wheeler's job is to report the news from London direct to American radio listeners and televisioners an average of 10 times per week. But if there is a major news item in Britain, such as the death of King George VI or the sinking of the freighter Flying Enterprise, he may make that many trans-Atlantic news-casts a day. An ordinary day finds Wheeler reporting twice on NBC-TV's "Today," once on NBC radio's "World News Roundup," and DIXIELAND AND DANCING: A new type of entertainment package is being offered at Vito's (formerly the French Village) on S. Park st.

Dick Ruedebusch, jazz trumpeter who led a popular combination at Club Hollywood for more than a year, has the same band on the stand from 8:30 to 11:30 p. m. Sundays, alternating with Vito's orchestra.

The evening has music for both listening and dancing.

Besides Ruedebusch, the Dixieland crew has Eddie Stein, drums; Eric Smith, clarinet, and Jimmy McCluskey, bass and vocal.
