Prof. Meeker Wins Prize in N.Y. Art Competition

By HELEN MATHESON (State Journal Staff Writer)

The Wisconsin Players grappled gallantly Tuesday night with a strange and difficult play—"Billy Budd," based on the Herman Melville novel.

Their courage and craftsmanship won them a moral victory—but it was pretty much a case of winning the statistics and losing the game. The audience was interested but unimpressed.

Much of the fault was the authors' remarking to some provocative things to say about Good and Evil and some extremely apt and pertinent observations about the conflict between real and abstract justice. But, dramatized in the lives of men aboard a British naval vessel in the wartime year of 1798, they make for a play heavy on talk and light on vivid characterization.

"Billy Budd" is the story of a man—youthful, lovable, and superbly innocent—who kills a psychotic superior. Goodness thus having destroyed Evil, it is in turn destroyed by it—and by an abstract justice that made a court to condemn a man it holds morally guiltless.

The play is written in three curiously contrasting parts. One portrays in raw terms the sordid life below the decks of the HMS Indomitable. One is full of action, giving the Players joyous opportunity to clamber about the rigging of their clever sets and to conduct a full naval engagement offstage. And one is weighty with discussion.

To be believed, "Billy Budd" demands three powerful characterizations in the key roles, and the Players who filled them lacked—not skill—but maturity and command and conviction. Ronald Halse came closest to the goal in the title role, giving Billy a touching air of trusting and generous goodness.

Robert Kojman—handicapped by the authors' failure to develop the character credibly—was unable to make the demonic master-at-arms believably sinister. And in spite of Ordean Ness' earnest work, the audience never was gripped by the agony of the captain forced to choose between his conscience and a pitiless concept of duty.

Standouts in minor roles in the large all-male cast included Arthur Dorlag as a warm-hearted officer and Jack Youcm and John Vincent in showy character parts.

The play was directed by Jonathan Curwin with Robert Murray as assistant. Lawrence Brown did the settings and Gerald Kahan handled lighting. The play will be repeated in the Wisconsin Union theater at 8 tonight through Saturday.

Owner of 'Talking' Horse Defends Pet as No Fraud, Hoax

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—The owner of Lady Wonder, the "talking" horse that is basking in a new spurge of publicity in her old age, stoutly defended her pet and business associate—Tuesday as "neither fraud nor hoax."

In his first published in the Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology in 1928, he concluded the Lady had some telepathic ability and declared there did not "appear to be any reasonable possibility of signaling."

In the second report, issued a year later, Dr. Rhine said "additional training and public showing had built up a system of signaling which became evident." He did not, however, withdraw his first report.

Lady's resurgence of publicity began last week when Massachusetts authorities credited Lady with providing the "tip" that led to discovery of the body of Danny Johnston, 4-year-old Quincy, Mass. child who had been missing from his home for nearly two years.

Players Grapple with Melville; Audience Interested, Unmoved

Prof. Dean J. Meeker of the University of Wisconsin art education department is among 100 American and foreign artists winning prizes in the Hallmark Art Award competition, it was announced Tuesday in New York City.

Meeker's water color, "Three-Wise Men," won a $50 prize. Only other Wisconsin winner was J. F. Hlavacek, Kenosha, whose "Christmas Past" also won $50.

First prize of $2,000 went to Anton Refregler, Woodstock, N. Y., whose "The Italian," a painting in Swiss, Italian, and French painting style, then will go on tour.

Baby, Mistaken for Burning Clothes, Dies in House Fire

NEWPORT, Ky. (UP)—A tiny baby girl died of burns Tuesday after firemen called to extinguish a blaze in her home mistook her for a "burning bundle of clothing."

Thirteen-month-old Louise Sebastian's frilly clothes caught fire when her 3-year-old brother, Thomas, pushed her chair too close to a gas heater. He said he was trying to reach their father's pipe on the mantel.

Two men driving by the home saw smoke coming from the home. They stopped, called the fire department, then threw the burning overinflated chair into the yard. The tiny bundle rolled onto the ground.

Fire Chief Andrew Laboiteaux said, "I noticed the chair and what looked like a bundle of clothes as I ran to the house. One look inside and I told the pumper to go on back. There wasn't any more fire."

"Then I saw that little bundle in the yard move," Laboiteaux said. "I picked it up. It made little noises."

The horrified chief ran to a fire department ambulance. The still smoldering clothes blistered his hands.

Emergency squadsmen and doctors worked to save the little girl but she died a half hour later at a hospital.

Acting Coroner Robert Dorsey said the child's father, Thomas Sr., was at work and their mother, Mrs. Betty Sebastian, was cleaning the back yard when the child was burned. The two men who reported the fire left before authorities could get their names.
