

The Sunday Spotlight Of FM, TV, and RPMs

By WILLIAM L. DOUDNA

It looks now to the staunch supporters of FM (frequency modulation) radio that they'll have their day. Among them is Robert Lewis Shayon, who with Goodman Ace shares the radio-television assignment on Saturday Review magazine.

In a recent issue, he pointed out that changes in the general radio picture have reduced the dominant position of AM (amplitude modulation, or standard) broadcasters. Among the causes has been the new, but little publicized, international agreement on channels which increased Cuba's clear-channel assignments and reduced those in the U. S.

And FM itself is a reason, Shayon believes. "Once people find out what FM radio offers them in freedom from static, wider program range, and fuller tonal quality, AM for them usually becomes an 'antidote' medium."

Television is another factor, he says, because it has largely preempted night-time audiences in big cities.

Shayon cites some figures from Boston: When WGBH went on the air with its "high quality but not high-hat" FM schedule, "15.4 per cent of all radio homes in five metropolitan Boston counties had FM equipment. After WGBH had been on the air a year, the figure jumped to 24.2 per cent—a vivid rise of 57 per cent."

And he concludes: "Despite frequent reports of its demise, FM is not at all entombed, but alive and reaching ever-widening circles of the American people with an ever-increasing variety of special services. From New Hampshire to Honolulu, more FM stations are today coming into being than are going out.

"A hard-core Gideon's army have kept their lamps burning and the trumpets blowing. Midian, they say, will inevitably be theirs, conquered by the sword of superiority."

While the cost of television sets has increased in recent years, TV reception costs less per screen inch than ever before, the magazine Electronics reports. Today the average price is less than $10 per screen inch, while in 1949 it was about $40. Then, a 7-inch screen set cost $300; today, one with a 20-inch screen is available at $200.

Another change: Until 1949 all screens were round; today 98 per cent of all tubes 18 inches and larger are rectangular.

The magazine adds that in 1953 the predominant screen will be the 21-inch size.

Choices among recent popular records, with asterisks denoting comparative worth:

* * * Mindy Carson: "Barrels 'n' Barrels of Roses," a lively ditty which may well turn into a "sleeper"—the kind of hit which arrives late. It's paired with "All the Time and Everywhere," a ballad. Percy Faith's orchestra plays accompaniment. (Columbia).

* Fred Lowry: "Sweet Leliani" and "Dancing Tambourine," both nicely whistled; smooth choral and orchestral backing. (Columbia).

* Alan Dean: "Give Me Your Lips," from "April in Paris," and "Half Heart," a pair of pleasant ballads. (MGMM).

* Woody Herman: "I Cried for You," starring Woody's sax, and "Livin' on Love," Latin rhythm; the first side should sell it. (MGMM).

* Doris Day and Johnnie Ray: "Ma Says, Pa Says" and "A Full Time Job." There aren't many anymore, but the pairing happens to make Johnnie sound better than usual. (Columbia).

* Johnny Desmond: "April in Paris," from the movies, and "Si Petite," more ballads neatly done. (MGMM).

* * * Josef Marais and Miranda: "South African Folk Songs," a 10-inch LP which should please the Marais fans completely, and win new adherents. Among the songs are "Sugarbush," "Ma Says, Pa Says," and "Pity the Poor Pilat."

Lady Macbeth Went Mad

One of the plays of Shakespeare has the title of "Macbeth." It is a tragedy, and the scene is laid in Scotland.

A central figure in the play is a chieftain named Macbeth, and another is his wife, Lady Macbeth, a woman with royal blood in her veins. Macbeth turned out to be a murderer, but to a large extent he was the victim of his wife's ambition.

She wanted to be a queen, and cared little, if at all, about how wicked might be her path to power.

Early in the play, Macbeth was walking across a field in company with another chieftain when three witches appeared. One with hailed him as "Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter."

Told Prophecy to Wife

If Macbeth had kept those words secret, he might have lived happily, but he told his wife what he heard. This news set her ambition aflame, and the seeds of crime were sown in her mind.

King Duncan, the Scottish ruler, made a journey, and his route lay through the lands of Macbeth. He became a guest in the chieftain's castle.

After taking a meal in the castle, the king went to the bedroom, which was provided for him. Two men were placed on guard at the bedroom door.

Was Taunted into Action

The royal visitor slept, but while he slept, plotting went on against his life. Lady Macbeth provided the guards with wine, and they fell into a stupor.

It was agreed that Macbeth should slay the sleeping monarch, but he hesitated to do so. Then, taunted into action by his wife, he committed the murder.

To place blame on the guards Lady Macbeth smeared blood on them, making it appear that their daggers had been used in the killing.

Next morning there came to the castle a friend of the king, a chieftain named Macduff. On entering the bedroom, he saw the slain man. Pretending that he, too, was shocked, Macbeth killed the two guards, to punish them for a deed of which they were innocent.

Macbeth and his wife became the new rulers of Scotland. Now they had wealth and power, but their life was without joy. Feeling that the crimes would be exposed, Lady Macbeth brooded until she fell into a state of madness.

Death soon carried the queen away, and Macbeth as well. The man who had obtained a throne with dagger thrusts died in a duel with Macduff.
