Thoughts on Music and TV

By WILLIAM L. DOUDNA
Random thoughts and second guesses:
Concert goes to second modern music more readily when it's vocal than when it's instrumental.

"Several people have told me you don't like television," one of the men in the advertising department told me the other day.

'Hill People' Train Pythons

In some of the hilly parts of the Philippines live the half-savage tribesmen who are called "hill people." Certain of these have the custom of taming the big snakes known as pythons.

A python 12 or 15 feet long is a dangerous enemy, in the usual course of things. These hill people, however, obtain young pythons and raise them until they reach large size. Having been fed well, they are gentle toward their owners.

Some of the pythons are of light color and are described as "white pythons." These, we are told, serve as objects of prayer to the tribesmen!

The mountain folk known as Ilongotes are fond of ornaments. One of them may carry several pounds of brass wire wound about the neck and arms. The wire may have the form of rings, or it may be wound on the arm or neck in a kind of spiral.

A queer belief of the Ilongotes is that the soul of a human being goes traveling while he is asleep. They say that dreams show actual adventures of the soul. It is against their custom to wake anyone up in a sudden way; if they did this, they say, the soul might fly off and get back on its travels quickly enough.

Members of another tribe in the Philippines live in the southern end of the island of Mindanao. They are called Bagobos, and many of them dwell in lowlands along the coast.

The Bagobos are known for their fancy clothing. The men wear jackets and short trousers, well woven and dyed. Red and white are the favorite colors, and often there are beads on the jackets. Bands of beads are worn just below the knees by Bagobo men. They also put on necklaces, and earrings.

Women in the Bagobo tribe wear costumes with long skirts. Often they are loaded heavily with jewelry, including bracelets made of brass or silver, and earrings which may be the size of silver dollars, or larger. Ivory is used at times, for the earrings.

A guitar of a sort is employed by these people to make music. A young man may play while his fair maid listens and—at the same time—puffs a home-made cigar!

When "Paris '90," as recorded by Cornelia Otis Skinner on a Columbia LP, was reviewed here, the comment included a note that, in some cases, the characterization required sight as well as sound for full appreciation.

That will be remedied Feb. 23, for Miss Skinner will do the whole of "Paris '90" that night at the Parkway theater.

Two deep bows go today to two men of WHA and the state network.

To Bob Homme, for his consistently funny scripts and dead-pat delivery on Friday's "Band Wagon" programs;

To DeAlton Neher, for his diligence in finding first-rate Wisconsin musicians for his "Music in Wisconsin" series on Sundays.

DISCS OF THE DAY: A few recommended recordings.

"Excerpts from 'La Vie Parisienne'" Offenbach-Rosenthal, and "Excerpts from 'Carmen,'" Bizet, recorded by Jennie Tourel and the Columbia Symphony orchestra under Jean Morel.

"Whispers in the Dark," recorded by Paul Weston's orchestra. . . Smooth playing of such favorites as "What Is There to Say," "Whispers in the Dark," "Why Was I Born," and others. (Columbia).

"Hurry, Hurry, Hurry" and "The Dance of Mexico," recorded by Sammy Kaye's orchestra. A ballad and a lively dance. (Columbia).
