

TIP OF THE MORNING: For a long time, movies have worried about TV competition. Now TV is worried about movies. As a direct result of the surge of interest in three-dimension films, watch for television to seek speed-up of color licensing.

IN tonight's concert at the Masonic auditorium, the Madison Civic Symphony orchestra will introduce to Madison Samuel Barber's "Knoxville: Summer of 1915." Walter Heermann will conduct the program, which will start at 8:15, Vera Weikel Adams, Madison soprano, will be soloist.

HEERMANN

The Barber work was commissioned by Eleanor Steber, who sang it first in 1947. It is based on part of an autobiographical essay by James Agee. The program notes for the concert, written by Helen Marling Supernaw, describe Barber's music as "marked by a disarming simplicity in the skilled craftsmanship of his orchestration" and calls tonight's offering "charming and nostalgic."

Besides singing with the orchestra in the Barber composition, Mrs. Adams will sing "Leise, Leise," from "Der Freischutz." It is a woman's prayer for the safe return of her sweetheart from a shooting contest.

Cesar Franck's "Symphony in D Minor"—his only symphony—will open the program, and "Jubilee," a symphonic sketch by George Whitefield Chadwick, will complete it. This has been substituted for "Till Eulenspiegel."

As usual, admission will be free. The concert will be presented by the Madison Civic Music Assn. and the Madison Vocational and Adult school, and supported in part by the cooperation of the Madison Musicians Assn. through a grant from the music performance trust fund of the recording industry.

DISC OF THE DAY: Sarah Vaughn changes pace for "A Lover's Quarrel," a waltz ballad recorded with Percy Faith's orchestra for Columbia. The second side is "I Confess." Both are high grade.

LUCEY: Despite the fact that "I Love Lucy" is television's top-rated show, Hollywood hears it will be dropped by its sponsor because it isn't selling products. The same source says that the ratio between TV costs and sales is so out of balance that advertisers are doing some re-figuring. All this probably means that one of two things will happen—either network television will have to prove it can sell, or the country will get "pay-as-you watch" TV.

MUSIC: Seven members of the Euterpe club will entertain patients at the Wisconsin Neurological foundation Friday night. They are Mmes Richard White, L. A. Joos, Richard Heine, Ernest Stanke, F. F. Bright, Charles Crownhart, and Ralph Newton.

PLEA: As at the time of the Rose Bowl game, television viewers have asked us to suggest that those things which interfere with reception be held to a minimum during the Davey-Gavilan fight. Several said the plea was successful Jan. 1.

NAMES IN THE NEWS: For the second time in a few months, John Hodiak and John Derek will be teamed in a picture. It's Columbia's "Mission over Korea."

Audrey Totter will play her first musical role in "Cruisin' Down the River."

Ward Bond will be Gary Cooper's pal in "Blowing Wild," adventure picture to be filmed in Mexico.

Two University of Wisconsin artist-educators are represented in "American Serigraphs in Paris," which will tour Europe this year. Profs. Warrington Colecott and Dean Meeker are among 18 Americans in the show, which opened in Paris in December.

Dianne Foster, Canadian radio actress, has been screen-tested by three U. S. studios. Vaughn Monroe's next picture will be "The Professor and the Co-Ed."

DICKENS: Nearly 60 West High

School pupils have bought a block of tickets to attend the Friday matinee performance by Emylin Williams as Charles Dickens in the Wisconsin Union theater.

The high school students, many of whom have been studying works by the Victorian novelist, will hear selections from "A Tale of Two Cities," "Christmas Stories," "Dombey and Son," "Pickwick Papers," and "Our Mutual Friend."

Williams does his one-man show costumed in the evening dress worn by Dickens, including a full beard, white gloves, and the inevitable red carnation. At the evening program he will read from "Bleak House," one of Dickens' most typical and controversial novels.

The engagement is sponsored by the Wisconsin Union theater committee. Tickets for both matinee and evening performances are now on sale at the Union boxoffice.
