

Bill Doudna's

SPOTLIGHT Summer Theater

TIP OF THE MORNING: Will Rogers, Jr., may star in a CBS radio series called "Country Editor." An audition tape was to be made this week.

A NEW dramatic organization, the Repertory Theater, will open a season of plays July 1 at the Woman's bldg. The company will do six productions this season with performances four nights each week through Aug. 22.

Don and Ann Soule are managers, with George Bird as technical director and William Kellman as business manager.

Agatha Karlen Fowlkes will return to the professional stage as a member of the group. Mrs. Fowlkes, wife of the dean of the University of Wisconsin school of education, was leading woman with the Al Jackson Players here before her marriage. She played opposite Melvyn Douglas and Ralph Bellamy at the Garrick (now the Madison) theater.

Both the Soules are experienced in professional and non-professional theater; Don was a Madison Critics Award while a member of Wisconsin Players.

Others in the company will be Helen Lauritzen and Charles Mark, both campus "Oscar" winners; Margaret Urban, Donna Weniger, and Donald Robinson. Bird also has been seen with Wisconsin Players and the Little Hollywood Players.

The season's schedule:
 "The Importance of Being Earnest," July 1-4 and July 8-11;
 "Angel Street," July 15-18;
 "She Stoops to Conquer," July 22-25.

annual Madison Critics Awards will be presented at the annual banquet of Wisconsin Players, to be held at 6 p. m. Sunday, May 24, at the Heidelberg Hofbrau.

NAMES IN THE NEWS: Water colors by John Warren, Madison, and John Dukes McKee, Chicago, are being shown daily except Sunday at the Madison Community Center. The paintings and their reproductions were brought here recently to be shown during a round table on graphic arts. They will be on view through May 20.

Prof. Raymond Dvorak, conductor of bands at the University of Wisconsin, will be a guest conductor Sunday at a concert in Cahn auditorium, Evanston, Ill., honoring Glenn C. Balum, retiring director of Northwestern university bands. Other guest conductors will be Edwin Franko Goldman, New York City; A. A. Harding and Mark H. Hindsley, University of Illinois; William D. Revelle, University of Michigan; Louis M. Blaha, Morton high school, and Paul Yoder, composer.

Louise Munson, Madison, sang with the Beloit College choir at its recent Spring concert.

Theatergoers who saw Charles Laughton and Sir Cedric Hardwicke in "Don Juan in Hell" at the Wisconsin Union theater will hardly recognize them in "Salem" now at the Parkway theater. Instead of evening wear, they donned period costumes to play King Herod and Tiberius Caesar, respectively.

Jack Bailey may add a Saturday "Queen for a Day" show to his schedule.

Curt Massey claims he saw this sign over a store's display of fireplace accessory: "Anything You Little Heart Desires."

THE CORONATION: As far back as December, 1951, when George VI was still King of England, the National Broadcasting Co. (NBC) began making plans for covering the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II.

The initial planning was instituted as a result of a letter from Romney Wheeler, NBC's London bureau manager—so Davidson Taylor, network director of public affairs, recalls.

"Wheeler suggested that although it might seem early at the time, we should begin to consider the many problems connected with covering the coronation of Queen Elizabeth should her revered father die," Taylor says.

Within a few days, network officials began to tackle the hundreds of major and minor considerations involved in the task of televising and broadcasting the ceremony that will take place in Westminster abbey June 2.

Taylor, who will be in London on Coronation Day to supervise the NBC operation, made his first trip to England in connection with planning this coverage in April, 1952. As a result of these preliminary discussions, NBC applied for its microphone and camera positions along the procession route in May, 1952—13 months before the coronation date.

On June 2, about 200 persons—commentators, production men, technicians—will be working to help NBC tell the story of the coronation.

Starred programs are also carried on corresponding FM stations: WISCFM, 98.1
