Carson Gulley Will Show His Cooking Secrets on TV

Carson Gulley, long a favorite figure on radio and "in-person" cooking demonstrations, will take his talents to television when WMTV goes on the air next month.

A permanent kitchen will be built in the station's studios on the West Belt Line especially for Gulley's program, in which he will show exactly how he prepares the special dishes which have made him famous.

One of the most important features will be a big cabinet full of spices and herbs, important factors in most of Gulley's recipes.

Now supervising chef of the division of residence halls at the University of Wisconsin, Gulley has been a Madison resident since 1926, when he was "discovered" by D. L. Halverson — then director of dormitories and commons at a Tomahawk summer resort.

Learned Fast

Born in Arkansas, the chef was one of a farm family of 10 children. The youngsters attended school only two months a year, but Carson learned so readily that he graduated from high school after only two years' attendance. He returned to teach for three years, working on the farm between sessions.

He spent two years as a share-cropper, but gave it up for "regular job" — dishwasher in a restaurant.

When the cook quit, Gulley got his job and liked it so well that he has been at it ever since.

His first major advance came a few years later when the president of Principia college, St. Louis, tasted his chocolate pie and promptly hired him as college chef. It was during a summer vacation from this job that Halverson tasted his cooking and brought him to Madison.

Taught Others

During World War II, he was chosen by the government to direct a course of navy cooks and bakers on the university campus. Later, he was senior instructor of a chef's training class established here under the GI Bill of Rights.

He also set up a training course at Tuskegee institute, and last year that school awarded him its "Master of Craft" certificate, given annually to one person chosen by industry.

The Sunday Spotlight

Random Thoughts on Records

(State Journal Music Editor)
By WILLIAM L. DOUBNA

Time was when vocalist names were rarities on dance records. In fact, one of the collector's great thrills came when he finds for a certainty, that he has discovered the voice of a celebrity on a disc whose label bears either no singer's name or an obviously false one.

Today, the opposite is true. The singer is the star, with few exceptions, and the orchestra is incidental—although a good band can make or break a vocal recording.

This appears to have led to three things:

ONE. The singer's effort to create a new and distinctive sound, even though it may be no more than an extreme "pushing" of his voice.

TWO. A new and laudable emphasis on lyric writing—for if a song is to sell on the basis of the singer's rather than the orchestra's delivery it must have either clever or easily remembered words; and THREE. Contrariwise, an occasional success for a purely instrumental number—"Sleigh Ride" and "Blue Tango" are cases in point. The sad part about this is that too often, when the instrumentalists start to slump, somebody comes up with lyrics, usually inane.

DISCS OF THE DAY: Some recent and recommended "pops" records . . . Paul Weston orchestra (Columbia): "Anna," with some fine brass work, and "Dutch Treat," more nice listening.

• Louis Prima orchestra (Columbia): "Oh, Marie," an oldie with lyrics in English and Italian, and "Luigi" for Prima fans.

• Marlene Dietrich (Columbia): "Look Me Over Closely," her best yet, and "Time for Love" written for her radio show, and the less said the better.

• Johnnie Ray (Columbia): "Somebody Stole My Gal," a good revival, and "Glad Rag Doll," with little appeal to anybody but Ray-niacs.

• Guy Mitchell (Columbia): "Walkin' and Wonderin'," solid Mitchell treatment, and "Wise Man or Fool," slow ballad. Mitch Miller's orchestra shines, as usual.

• Lew Douglas orchestra (MGM): "Ruby," done beautifully with chorus on the lyrics, and "My Flaming Heart," nicely sung by Lucille Reed.

• Barbara Ruick (MGM): "Now That I'm in Love," a clever song based on part of the "William Tell" overture, and "Gh-L-I," a pleasant Oriental-type tune. We're still pulling for this gal to find the one tune that will really put her over.

• Jack Pina orchestra (MGM): "Little Red Monkey," with Jack at the electric organ and with some happy string work, and "Wrong Note Rag," which has the makings of a hit in this arrangement.

• Leroy Holmes orchestra (MGM): "Caravan," a revival and "Three on a Match," with Johnny Corvo singing another oldie.

Uncle Ray's Corner

Knives Came Before Forks

More than 300 years ago, Jonathan Swift wrote these words:

"Fingers were made before forks, and hands before knives." That Irish author was correct. The human hand had to exist before such things as knives and forks could be made.

Knives came into the world long before forks. Back in the Old Stone Age, men had knives made of sharp-edged flint. We know this because hundreds of flint knives have been found in caves where Stone Age people lived. The cave folk were able to cut their meat before, and after it was cooked.

Spoons of Ivory

The facts about spoons are less clear. These probably go back to the Stone Age, but we are without positive proof. We may suppose that shells served as spoons for long time.

In ancient Egypt, spoons made out of wood and ivory were employed. The Greeks and Romans

Study on Handling River Waste Sought

A study of the methods of handling waste materials which enter the Yahara river and Madison lakes will be asked for at the meeting of the Rivers and Lakes Commission Wednesday, Dr. C. K. Kincaid, city health commissioner said Thursday afternoon.

Thayer Burnham, city biochemist, said the study would not only include the present methods of handling waste, but also would include a look into the future of the lake pollution situation.

While the sources of most pollution materials are known, Burnham said, the study would reveal if the present methods of handling waste materials are keeping them out of the river and the lakes.

The commission will make recommendations to the City Council on 1953 contracts for spraying the lakes and mosquito control for other municipalities.

Weed-cutting on the lakes also will be discussed, Kincaid said.

Milwaukee Breweries, Strikers Adjourn Talks

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Negotiations in the strike against six Milwaukee breweries have been adjourned with no future meeting date set.

James Croke, chairman of the breweries' negotiating committee, said Friday "no meetings are scheduled at this time." Union officials could not be reached for comment on the wage talks.

The 7,500 CIO United Brewery Workers union members walked out Thursday morning to back demands for a 35-hour week, a 25-cent hourly raise, and welfare and pension plans.

Union and company negotiators broke off their talks late Thursday night without taking up the wage issue.
