Maude Adams, 80, Famed Actress of N. Y. Stage, Dies

TANNERSVILLE, N. Y. (AP)—Maude Adams, the famous "Peter Pan" of Broadway nearly half a century ago, died almost alone at her farm home near here Friday.

Dr. Edwin Mulbury of Windham, Miss Adams' physician, said the cause of her death was "probable heart disease." She was brought home from a hospital only recently after a bout with bronchitis and pleurisy and fell ill suddenly Friday morning. She died at 12:40 p.m. in this Rip Van Winkle section of the Catskill mountains.

Miss Adams won her reputation as one of America's greatest actresses in "Peter Pan," which opened in New York in 1906. Her new stage debut was in 1888 in James H. Barrie's "Little Minister," and in 1892 she was leading lady to John Drew in "The Masked Ball."

"Quality Street," "What Every Woman Knows," "A Kiss for Cinderella," and "Jeanne d'Arc" followed in rapid succession as her fame spread around the world. One fan was reported to have sat through one of her performances 47 times.

In 1918 she retired but returned briefly to the stage in 1931 with Otis Skinner in "The Merchant of Venice." She headed the dramatics department at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., for a time after that, resigning to settle at her Catskill farm home here.

Born in Salt Lake City on Nov. 11, 1872, she was the daughter of an acting couple and made her first stage appearance at the age of four.
