DON'T LET the names of Chekhov and Schnitzler scare you away from the Repertory Theater this week. There is positively nothing grim nor forbidding about the three one-act plays which opened Wednesday night at the Woman's bldg. Quite the contrary.

All are concerned with the approach to marriage—the bumbler's, the sophisticate's, the old army man's. All are funny, the Schnitzler play with its urbane satire on the legendary French attitude toward love and the two Chekhov bits with their farcical pictures.

Not only that, but the interlocking casts play them to the hilt with consistent merit.

Don Soule, Don Robinson, and Irving Cummings appear in two each, while Anne Soule, Donna Wenger, Don Phelps, and Virginia Rauch have one role each.

The plays (which will be repeated at 8:30 nightly through Saturday) are Chekhov's "The Marriage Proposal" and "The Boor" and Schnitzler's "Anatol's Wedding Morning."

The first is about a bumbling suitor who comes to propose to a non-stop talker and gets involved in interminable arguments with her and her father over land and hunting dogs, with all three overlooking the visit's purpose.

and credibility, is the sophisticated but romantic Parisian, Miss Rauch the tenacious woman, Phelps the down-to-earth friend, and Soule a servant.

"The Boor" tells of a self-imprisoned widow into whose home barges a rough-tough ex-officer, veteran of romantic as well as wartime battles. Their hot debate develops into preparations for a duel, with a sudden change of heart avertng it. Mrs. Soule is the widow, Soule the sudden suitor, and Cummings a nervous servant.

All are first-rate, and Mrs. Soule's delivery of the last line of the last play is the fitting topper for the evening of fun.

CITATION: The Boy Scouts of America have cited the NBC family comedy series, "My Son Jeep," as "the television program which depicts boyhood in the best American family tradition."

Martin Huston, who enacts the title role, accepted a plaque inscribed with the citation in behalf of the cast members, the writers and other production associates.

TUNISIA Violence Brings Death to 8

TUNISIA (AP)—Scattered violence in Tunisia, apparently inspired by the upheaval in the sister protectorate of Morocco, caused eight deaths in the past 24 hours, it was announced Wednesday.

Arab terrorists killed three persons, including a police inspector who was shot in the back of the head, and a French policeman who was shot in the back of the head.

The French resident to "get tough" with the troublemakers killed five Arabs.
