There are rious breeds of domestic cats. The tabby is a yellowish-gray animal, often banded with black. This is so common that many persons speak of cats in general as "tabbies."

Other domestic breeds include Persian and Siamese cats. A variety of the Persian breed has the special name of "silver Persian." Some cats have blue fur, and others are of orange color. There are chinchilla cats and Manx cats.

Cats In Tree

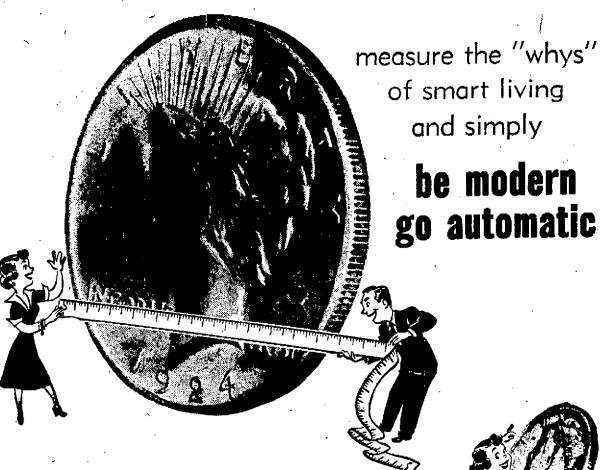

Domestic cats like to climb trees, but often fear to come down. This fact was marked in an account of a sad event in a Colorado mining town. Eights cats were purchased from actors in a small traveling circus. The cats stayed together when set free, but took fright and climbed a tall pine tree.

Food was place at the base of the tree, but the cats refused to do something about the situation. The tree was felled: the
