"Here is a hand that you may be able to use in your column," writes Robert Chow, who writes bridge articles in a newspaper that is published for hinese Canadians.

"After taking part in the Ca-nadian National Bridge Cham-pionships this year in Toronto, my partner, Joe Hum, and I dropped in the St. Clair Bridge Club for a game against two Toronto experts. "You may not approve the bidding of the following hand, and I shouldn't wonder, for I still don't know how my partner managed to find his final bid of six diamonds. However, judging from the results, there must be some logic in his bidding.

"The king of clubs was opened. As you can see, there wasn't any problem in the play. It was easy to ruff two hearts

It was easy to ruff two hearts in the dummy and then give up the ace of trumps.

"The bidding was certainly not according to the book, but it was not without merit. What do you think — was South just lucky, or logical?"

Both. And perhaps just a wee bit more lucky than logical. But there is no "book" way to bid a freakish hand, and I admire a man who bids this sort of hand to the hilt.

On the bidding. South had do no getting one of the more uses.

to the hilt.

On the bidding. South had, on getting one of the more usesome reason to believe that ful dummies that North might North would turn up with three have for his bidding — plus a diamonds and a singleton heart.

If North held two hearts, he would probably pass the bid of full hearts.

Nevertheless ! take my hat would probably pass the bid of stam with three aces and two stam with three aces and two four hearts.)
