Democrat Urges Defense Secretary Wilson's Ouster

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rep. Samuel W. Yorty (D-Calif.) accused Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson Wednesday of "wrecking" the Air Force and demanded that he be fired.

"The defense secretary has been using most of his energy since he arbitrarily lopped the Air Force budget in finding alibis for what he most certainly must know was a disastrous error," Yorty told a press conference.

The congressman cited what he termed contradictory statements by Wilson and President Eisenhower, with the defense secretary saying Russia lagged three to four years behind the United States in hydrogen bomb developments while the President said that war could be averted only by out-raising the Russians in the production of nuclear weapons.

"Manpower restrictions can wreck an Air Force and the (Wilson) is doing it," Yorty said. "Morale is very low because he crippled our first line of defense by his admittedly uninformed and arbitrary reduction of the Air Force budget."

Yorty said there was a growing sentiment in Congress to which he subscribed that Wilson should be fired. The congressman accused Wilson of thrusting aside recommendations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff that an absolute minimum for air defense was 143 wings.

As a result, he said, "we will lose the cold war and bring on a hot one which we will have to fight at a great disadvantage."

Russ Hint 2 Army Officers Deserted

VIENNA (UP) — The Russians reported Thursday that two Red Army officers had deserted and fled to the Soviet zone of Austria and the Soviet zone of Germany.

It was believed they may have deserted to the American zone.

Austrian police said they had been asked by Soviet authorities for aid in finding the Russian officers who vanished in a jeep Oct. 4, near Zvenitz.

WMAZC, Japan (AP) — Mrs. Tumiko Maruyama, 32, tired of life with her unemployed husband, walked into the Pacific Ocean at 12:30 a. m. Thursday and began swimming out to sea to drown herself.

Fishermen took her out of the water at 5 a. m. 6 miles off the coast. She was still swimming.

Swordfish Sometimes Pierce Bottoms of Ocean Vessels

During a visit at a museum in Singapore, I saw an oak plank three inches thick with the bill of a swordfish imbedded in it. The plank had been part of the bottom of a sailing vessel, and the swordfish had cut through it, also through a thin sheet of copper which lined the bottom.

The Singapore exhibit is only one of several of the kind on public display. The British Museum contains a similar board with the bills of three swordfish.

In addition to such exhibits, there are various records of swordfish "attacks" against boats. One account tells about a swordfish which sank its bill in the bottom of a fishing schooner, off the coast of Long Island, 78 years ago.

It may be that swordfish are gifted with little "common sense," but it seems likely that they ram ocean vessels only by accident. Fish usually fly to steer clear of objects much larger than themselves. Whether they strike by accident or design, their bills become stuck in wood, and seldom can be drawn out. If the bill is broken off, the fish must have a hard time during later months of its life.

An adult swordfish is without teeth. It has only the bill, or sword, to use in fighting.

A baby swordfish, on the other hand, starts out with a set of teeth but without a sword. As it grows, it loses the teeth, but its upper jaw grows outward. Slowly the upper jaw becomes a long, bony weapon. Often the sword is from three to five feet long.

It is hard, perhaps impossible, to give the average weight of an adult swordfish. Most of the very large ones on record have been obtained in southern parts of the Pacific Ocean. Gifford Pinchot, a former governor of Pennsylvania, harpooned one in the South Pacific with a weight of

CAVES BUICK CO.

FROM THE STAGEFUL of jazz stars at the Wisconsin Union theater Thursday, three emerged as undisputed champions: Ella Fitzgerald, the indefatigable singer, and Charlie Shavers, the incredible trumpeter.

The show was "Jazz at the Philharmonic," playing its second date in a day less than a year, and creating as much excitement among the 2,100 listeners at the two performances as it did last year.

There were fewer cries of "Go, Go," but that's outdated, anyway. There was less handclapping, and time to the music, but there was plenty of applause and an electric feel to the audience.

For almost 2 1/2 hours, the show went on, with the first half devoted to a jam session and the second to somewhat more stylized playing by the Oscar Peterson trio, the Gene Krupa trio, and the rhythm section of the whole group backing Miss Fitzgerald.

Of her, the audience wanted more—much more. But encores weren't forthcoming. The brilliant singer gave out with a lyrical style as well as with the blues, and the swing and the jazz. Her "Bahalou" was a classic by itself.

Peterson played almost the whole program, sitting in with Krupa and Willie Smith to form the Krupa trio; teaming with Herb Ellis, a great newcomer on guitar, and Ray Brown, bass, in his own outfit, and playing the jam session.

His amazing dexterity was matched by the surprising lightness of his touch in several numbers and by the total color he was able to get with virtually no use of the pedals.

Shavers, as usual, was a top-flight trumpet artist, doing all the familiar tricks plus a series of sudden changes of tone quality; Roy Eldridge almost matched him; their duet was a fine addition.

Another outstanding newcomer was J. C. Heard, drummer, who easily outdid Krupa. Bill Harris, also new, did great work here, work in the jam session but faltered badly on a solo ballad.

Biggest surprise was Willie Smith, who had loosened up in both style and technique since his last visit. He no longer sounded like every note had been carefully rehearsed, and he played with much more confidence and authority.

Flip Phillips and Benny Carter were their virtuoso selves on saxophones, and Ben Webster added lustre to that section. Carter's intimate tone on a ballad was a striking and lovely bit.

But Oscar, Ella, and Charlie were still the hit of the show and the greatest of the performers.

FREE MOVIE: Grade school children will be treated to a free movie Saturday in two Madison theaters as Fire Prevention Week comes to an end.

"Great Gans," starring Laurel and Hardy, and five cartoons will be shown at the Orpheum and Capitol beginning at 8:35 a. m. Parents have been invited to accompany the children by Managers Fred Reeth of the Capitol and Jack Scharnberg of the Orpheum.
