JACOBY ON BRIDGE
 By Oswald Jacoby

"Don't boast me over the goals for the bidding," my friend Arthur Goldsmith pleaded when he gave me the hand shown today. "I stretched a bit, my partner stretched a bit more, and they both stretched together. Anyway, we got a bit on the hand."

I gave my word, so naturally I ran to say anything about the very simple hand for the opening bid of one trump. If I hadn't promised, I'd say that a skippy hand like that should pass the merely invitational bid of two no-trump.

But I won't say it, largely because Arthur is one of the best bridge players in the country, and he feels like stretching a bit more to make his contract. Arthur got his first break when West opened the duce of clubs; three a couple of hearts, sealed Nobody had bid the suit, and it seemed quite safe. It just shows how deceptive appearances can be. If West had opened a spade, say, but then he had to get out there wouldn't have been a happy with a diamond. It did East no ending in this story.

East won the first trick with the ace of clubs and returned the three of spades, and Goldsmith won with the jack of spades and considered his resources. He could, through the queen of diamonds, take one spade, one heart, two diamonds, and four clubs. Eight tricks available, with one trick to go.

South quite wisely decided to run the clubs. The opponents would have to discard, and they might have trouble or give valuable information.

They did both. East had to find four discards on the long clubs, and the effort strained both his hand and his disposition. He could afford one diamond and one heart. Then the going got tough.
